ENTRANCE TO UNIVERSITY HALL

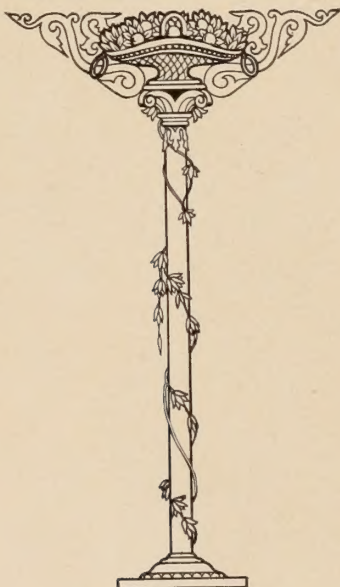

To GEORGE HUFF, the Man, whose strength of character has been an example to many

To GEORGE HUFF, the Friend, whose counsel and advice has been free and open to all

To GEORGE HUFF, the Athletic Director, whose true sportsmanship has placed Illinois in the front rank as a clean school

To GEORGE HUFF, the Illinoisian, whose loyalty has done so much for his Illinois and our Illinois,

This volume and all that it stands for is respectfully dedicated.

HE history of athletics at Illinois is rather brief, but it is a history of which she may well be proud. Throughout the country, whether she was winning or losing, Illinois has gained a reputation for clean, true sportsmanship which is worth more than mere winning. The "Illinois spirit"—the spirit of standing by the team through thick and thin, of supporting the men nobly whether the game be won or lost—this spirit has become almost a matter of course. Courteous treatment and a square deal for visiting teams, absence of dissention between students and faculty, a clean healthy spirit among the students—all these have been characteristic of athletics at Illinois.

All this shows the influence of a strong, clean personality, and suggests how much it is possible for one man to do. Those who have given the matter consideration know that Director Huff is responsible for the athletic situation at Illinois.

Mr. Huff is a true son of Illinois. He was born in Champaign and got his first ideas of baseball in watching the practice of the University students. He took to athletics readily. When he entered the University Academy in 1887 he attracted a good deal of attention by his skill in baseball, though it was not until 1889 that he made the team. He was at this time only sixteen years old, but he was the heaviest man on the team, though his weight did not seem in any way to interfere with his speed. His rapidity of action was marvelous. At various times he played in different positions. At first he was in the out field, but later was put at short stop. His work at first base and as catcher are, however, best remembered. He is without doubt the most brilliant baseball player Illinois has ever had, and she has not been lacking in brilliant players.

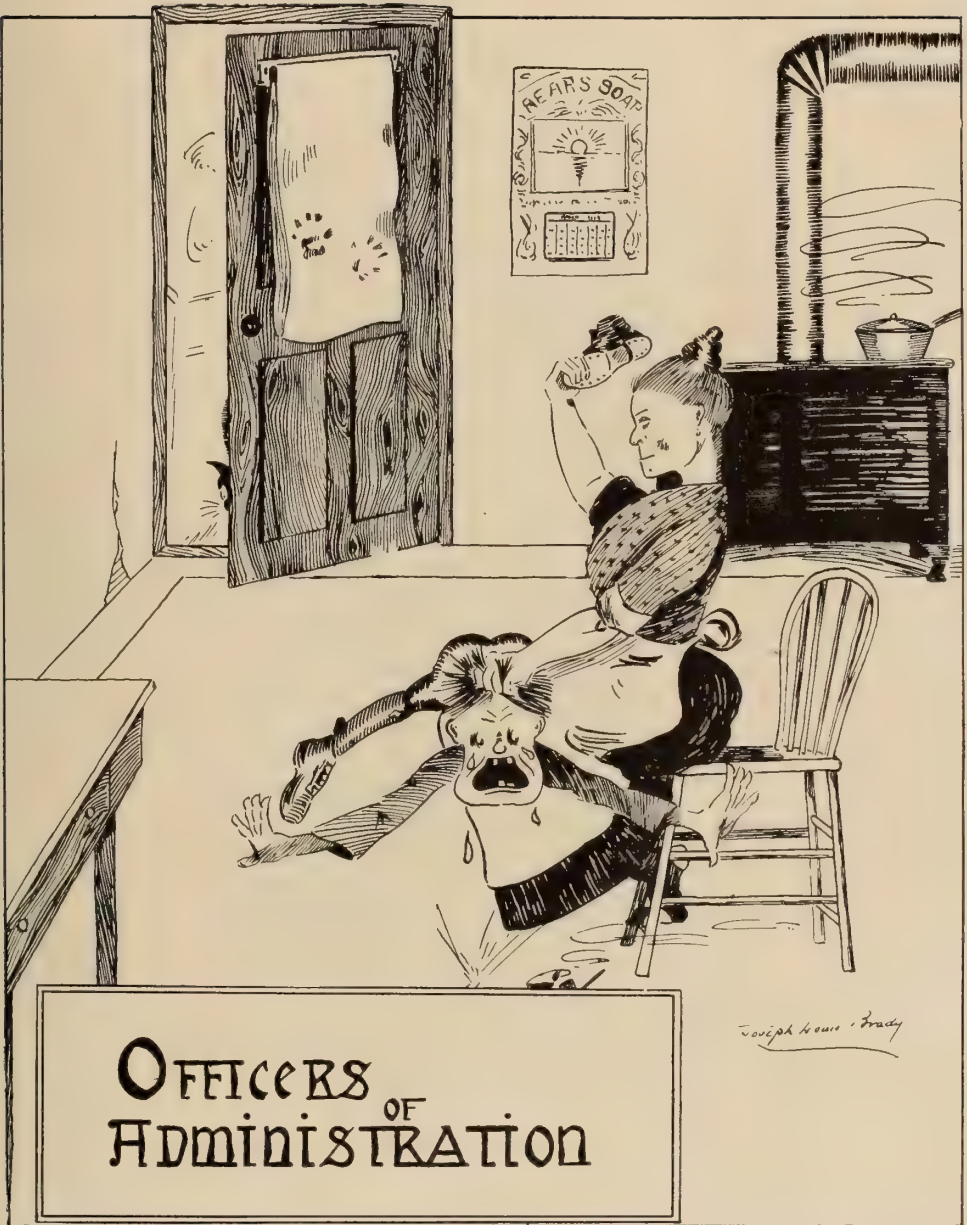

In 1890 Illinois had her first football team, and Mr. Huff was practically the whole team. It was a sort of girls' game as played in those days, however, as compared with what it now is, and would have pleased the most enthusiastic lover of a safe sport. Mr. Huff himself tells the story of going into the first game wearing a derby hat, and of coming out of the struggle with his head-gear undamaged. During his connection with the University as a student he was a leader of athletic sports, but at the same time his work as a student was good.

In 1893 he entered Dartmouth Medical School and was enrolled for four terms as a student of that institution. The Dartmouth faculty speak in the highest terms of his work as a student, and his athletic record is an unusual one. During both seasons he played on the college football team as guard, and in his first year he was made captain of the baseball team, on which he played first base. It is almost unheard of for a young western freshman to be elected to such a responsible athletic position, and it is simply a tribute to Mr. Huff's skill and personality.

In 1895 Mr. Huff returned to Illinois and was elected to his present position. His ability as an athletic coach is recognized all over the country, and his sterling character has won for him the highest respect of students and faculty as well. His honesty, his fairness, his high ideals give to his work an influence for good which can not be measured. Illinois is proud of him.

1907 CLASS HISTORY

THE Senior sat on the bank of a turbid little stream lazily watching the sticks float by. Sticks, sticks; the word kept recurring to his consciousness with an intermittent rhythm which he finally distinguished as the turning of a paddle-wheel in the water. A big, hulking object came gliding slowly toward him. From out the mist which enveloped the boat came the gentle tones of Mr. Henry Wadsworth Longfellow in earnest conversation with his old friend Robert Fulton.

“By Jove, Robert, but they’re a nice lot. Just thought I’d take a little run round the place to see how that bronze bust was coming on. It’s a handsome little likeness, if I do say it myself, and finished up in capital style. It helps the look of that Auditorium immensely and by the by, that class will have things pretty well started round the University before they leave. They have secured the erection of several new buildings, greatly improved the system of athletics and, by their own persistent efforts, done much to raise the standard of scholarship. Why, Bob, it’s really phenomenal the way those youngsters take hold of things. I declare, they know as much at twenty as I did at fifty. The underclassmen have the greatest respect for them, I’m told, and imitate them in every way possible. Of course, being away for twenty-five years a fellow naturally gets a little out of touch with things, but even I can see that these young folks are exceptional. How that little school is going to run without ’em next year is more than I know, but, of course, the outside world needs them badly and they’re sure to distinguish themselves wherever they are.”

These remarks, coming as they did from the lips of such an estimable fellow as Mr. Longfellow, the Senior accepted as final authority and took great pains to write them down verbatim, for the enlightenment of future generations.

'Tis but a peevish boy yet he walks well—ARTIE CLEMAN

1908 CLASS HISTORY

WHEN the Junior historian sets about preparing a record of his class's attainments during its college life, the knowledge that this is the last year its history will be in the "Illio," that in two more semesters it will be represented by only a series of photographs with the epitaphs of their originals beside them, that soon the university world will hear of his classmates only through that spiritual medium, the "Alumni Quarterly," which will report in a vague way of their happiness, or marriage, or both, and that in a little while there will be utter silence concerning them, he is likely to decide upon one of two schemes in writing up the biography. He either attempts to extol so highly the class to which he belongs as to create in the minds of the readers of the college annual the feeling that this truly wonderful group of students has done extraordinary deeds, and will do still more extraordinary ones, and therefore should be kept in mind, observed, and emulated; or else he submits manfully to the oblivion that must come, and chronicles his class's little deeds with fitting modesty, with gratitude that it was able to do even so much, with the hope that it may do a little more before the epitaph period, and that afterwards in the world to come its scattered members may spread abroad the helpful influence which surrounded them for four years at Illinois.

The class of 1908 entered the University three years ago a heterogeneous collection of individuals, green, ambitious, confident of their own abilities. By and by, after several months of training in regard to the insignificant position they occupied at Illinois, they drew together in their homesickness and their mutual suffering from hazing and roasts, and held a color rush. The elation they felt when they won their victory over the sophomores, the first freshman victory in the color-rush in the annals of the University, unified them somewhat, and the isolated members began to be animated by class spirit. They rejoiced together over the honors of the freshman debating team. They grew to feel at home, and, being at ease, they looked about them, and found all around older students and faculty members who had been helping them, and were ready to help them more in getting the best out of college life.

As Sophomores they became imbued with the idea that it was their duty to see that the new freshmen were impressed with the sense of insignificance which they themselves had once experienced, and which they now felt convinced had been for their ultimate good. Some were too active in performing what they conceived to be their duty, and realized all too late that the faculty did not entirely sanction their supervision of the freshmen's cold plunges, and they left the University for a year. Rebuffed, in their initial effort to promulgate Illinois traditions even as they had been taught them, the members of 1908 turned their attention to the Sophomore Cotillion. Their first social attempt was a success, and many thereupon began delving deep into the refinements and mysterious charms of social life. Others were utilizing their energies in other directions. In 1906 the Sophomores won the baseball championship. Their second year was a time when they absorbed all sorts of incongruous ideas, when they rebelled whenever rebellion was possible, when they criticised freely and felt assured that if they had their say the University would be run on a much better plan.

When they saw another class of newcomers arrive, fresh, hopeful, bright, with brains undinted and ready to receive all impressions good and bad, the class of 1908 began to feel somewhat more of the responsibilities of college life. They lost their harum-scarum attitude. They grew more conservative. They criticized less, and did more, each in his own line. Some thought that athletics demanded their attention. An unallowed, fairly-won touchdown kept them from the class championship in football, but they formed a majority on the All-Class-Team. In track, baseball, and football the 1908 representatives did the class proud. Some were of the conviction that the Christian Association needed them. Some gave their time to bettering conditions among the women students through the Woman's League. Great numbers set about the raising of the standard of university work at Illinois by bettering the quality of their own.

This is the outer history of the class of 1908. Its inner life has consisted in strengthening the good already existing in its members, and absorbing the good that has been all about it.

1909 CLASS HISTORY

THE story of the man who thrust his thumbs in the armholes of his vest, inflated his chest, and said: "I used to be a greasy mechanic, but look at me now," is apropos of the class of 1909. Like the man in the tales we once belonged to the great amalgamated association of the unsophisticated. Now, we are Sophomores—Sophomores in every sense of the word. So satisfied are we with our condition, that we are not even disturbed when an upper-classman reminds us that derivatively the word Sophomore means "a wise fool." No one could know another as well as he knows himself. If the class had any faults, its own members would be the first to realize them. Thus our own consciousness of superiority proves our worth.

"What have we, as a class, done?" you ask. You would better say: "What have we not done." Our athletic career, as Freshmen, was no cause for shame. Our football team was a "winner." In the picture of the group [page 175, '07 Illio] may be seen the faces of some of the weightiest men in the university, if not in the universe. In all things we were active. Our eloquence easily won the Freshman-Sophomore debate from our big brother, 1908. In all our achievements we kept ever in mind the collegestudent's motto: "Do not let study interfere with your college course." Naturally when we became Sophomores, more was expected of us, in both mental and physical gymnastics. The resolutions against hazing proved, not only the literary talent of the framers, but also unprecedented political acumen, in an effort for a "stand-in" with the dean of undergraduates, and the Solons of the state. We defeated the Preps in football and lost the color-rush. We should not have done these things, of course, had we not felt that the "Preps" needed a quietus put on their conceit, and that the freshmen needed encouragement. Again we won the Freshman-Sophomore debate with as much ease as before.

The class of 1909 also has shown discretion in the choice of its class-presidents. Our first one needs no comment. His worth made him stand out prominently, when, as self distrusting Freshmen, we looked among the unseasoned timber for a leader. An orator it was, that led us through the intricacies of our first semester of college life. The second time we made another wise choice. Number two was an athlete and a "mixer." He had been here before and knew how class politics were run. After a summer of reflection we came again to the ballot box, and the man we chose was a politician,—a friend to the "common people." Under his efficient guidance there came to pass the much postponed 1909 Cotillion. Some "punster" has called it the "Slop-em-o'er" Cotillion,—called our class dance an ugly name. We do not care; truth alone hurts. We knew that the thrust was due to the envy of some one whose class, as Sophomores, had not been so successful in its dance. Now we have still a fourth leader who has yet to demonstrate to his illustrious followers the line along which he intends to make his fame.

There is an end to our story. We have distinguished ourselves more by keeping out of class scrapes than by positive achievement. It yet remains for us to attain other distinction.

FRESHMAN HISTORY

URBANA CLARION

SEPTEMBER 19th, 1907. The University of Illinois opened its fall semester today with a most prosperous showing. Especially noticeable are the freshmen, the class of 1910. They have invaded this town in great hordes. Besides being strong in numbers, they seem superior to any class that it has been our good fortune to welcome for many years. Though verdant, and seemingly interesting candidates for prospective boneyard baptisms, they possess all requisite qualities for good freshmen.

Sufficient unto the day is the greenness thereof!
We wish them good speed. Welcome to our city!

CHAMPAIGN WASP

NOVEMBER 6th, 1907. The eyes of Champaign were appalled, hurt and startled this morning by the glaring sight of disfiguring posters, displayed on the windows, walls and walks of dwellings in the university district. The night was a restless one for all. The sophomore class was posting its "procs"—untrue, defamatory declamations against the freshmen. Ever and anon there were smothered cries of "Bunch up," 'og! speaking of a mystery. But one freshman was wise. The secret had been divulged by a sister classman, her knowledge received as "confidential" from a sophomore friend. And wherein lies the beauty of a secret, if not to tell it? Accordingly this maid, burdened with knowledge striving for utterance, sought the ear of a freshman, who immediately 'phoned his classmates. The wires were hot. Smoke arose. The sophomores smelt the smoke, and sought the troublesome source. He was discovered and subjected to imprisonment in a harsh manner.

In the meantime '10 had gathered its forces to aid its captured champion. With much difficulty they were suppressed as the small hours of morning approached. When danger from this valiant band of defenders of truth was past, the imprisoned freshman was brought forth from his cell, and compelled under pain of death to carry the bucket of paste necessary for the adherence of the procs (insult added to injury) while the sophomores wielded the brush and defaced the town. As a result of the harsh treatment, the maltreated freshman is lying at the point of death. The procs stand this morning as witnesses of his torture, and the depraved impoverished minds of 1909.

CHAMPAIGN WASP

NOVEMBER 9th, 1906. Last night the freshman class of the university returned the compliments of the season to its enemy, the Sophs. This latest edition of procs shows great brilliance of mind and is evidence that we will not be disappointed in our judgment and anticipation of their virtues. They put to shame the procs posted on Monday night last.

HOMER RATTLER

NOVEMBER ... , 1906. The inhabitants in this region were greatly disturbed yesterday afternoon by a noise as of distant battle. It lasted for some forty-five minutes, during which time many of us were frightened for fear of an earthquake. The ground shook and rumbled.

Ye Editor, having been a native of these parts for some years past, after consulting the almanac found that the disturbance was from a cause occurring once each year, generally in the fall. The area affected is about one hundred miles square, the storm center being Urbana in the County of Champaign.

The cause stated is this, that it is the annual custom of the freshman class to elevate its colors on a 45 foot oleaginous lubricated pole, and give the sophomores a chance to display their prowess in a struggle to take the fort.

Our special correspondent reports that it was a noble fight. The freshmen, however, realizing the inferiority of their opponents, made the pole 30 feet instead of 45, thus giving them an advantage over previous classes. Even with this handicap, the Sophs failed to make good, and the battle was to the freshmen. It is reported, though this cannot be confirmed, that seven sophomores were slain, the freshmen dead numbering but three, martyrs to the cause of freedom.

THE YELLOILLINI

DECEMBER 15th, 1906. The injustice of the new ruling of the Big Nine Conference, which bars freshmen from participating in intercollegiate athletics is plainly evident to us at Illinois. There is fine material among our freshmen, many of whom we feel would be of advantage to our teams. But as it now stands they waste their lustiness on the desert air. Think, students, think! Ponder on these things! In football, tennis, track and basketball, the freshmen challenge all.

LE BON TON (Paris)

FEBRUARY 1st, 1907. The latest thing decreed in the way of head gear is a small green cap. The tastes of the wearer are designated by a button on the top of the cap, a white button being worn for literary aspirations, yellow for agriculture, and red for engineering. The fad for these originated with the freshmen of the University of Illinois, U. S. A. Others would do well to copy.

FRESHMEN AND SOPHOMORES MEET INFORMALLY

LEE HARRISON METTLER, A. M., M. D.

Dr. L. Harrison Mettler, born June 1, 1863, in New York City, is the son of Isaac Voorhees and Marcella M. (Smith) Mettler, grandson of Levi Mettler, the family having settled prior to the revolution near Flemington, N. J. His maternal grandfather, the Hon. Garretson Smith of Philadelphia son of a well known Maryland planter and slave owner became so early convinced of the injustice of slavery that at the age of eighteen he came north to begin a long and honorable career in the cause of Anti-slavery and Temperance.

Dr. Mettler was educated in the Friends Seminary, a private school in Stuyvesant Square, New York City, the public school of that City; was graduated from the College of the City of New York in 1883 and received the degree of M. A. therefrom in 1886.

He began the Study of Medicine in 1883, attending a course of lectures at the College of Physicians and Surgeons (Columbia College) New York City and two courses at the Jefferson Medical College Philadelphia, receiving the degree of M. D. from the latter institution April 2, 1886. His preceptor was Wm. H. Pancoast, A.M., M.D., Professor of Anatomy and Clinical Surgery in the Jefferson Medical College. From 1884 to 1886 Dr. Mettler was assistant prosector, receiving many commendations for his dissections and special mention for his thesis on "The Biological Cell." In 1889 he was in attendance at the Hospital for the Paralyzed and Epileptic (Queen Square) London and at the Hospital de la Salpetriere, Paris; he afterwards visited the various Universities and Hospitals of Vienna, Berlin, Heidelberg and Edinburgh. He was made the recipient of many special courtesies from Mr. Wm. Adams, Drs. Ferrie, Horsley, Phillips and Murrell of London and from Charcot, Apostoli, Luteaud, and Warren Bey of Paris.

Dr. Mettler began the practice of Medicine immediately after graduation. From 1886 to '87 he was prosector and assistant to the Chair of Anatomy in the Medico-Chirurgical College of Philadelphia, Chief of the Medical Clinics from 1887-1891 and lecture and Clinical instructor in Mental and Nervous diseases and Electro-Therapeutics from 1888-1891. In 1891 he removed to Chicago and took up the practice of medicine.

He was retained and acted for a time in the capacity of medical examiner for the Nederland Life Insurance Co. of Holland and America and Neurologist to the Lakeside Hospital.

Dr. Mettler has been a member of the faculty of the College of Physicians and Surgeons (Chicago) since 1900, at first as the Professor of the Physiology of the Nervous System and for the past four years as associate Professor of Neurology. He is also Professor of Mental and Nervous diseases in the Chicago Clinical School.

He is attending Neurologist to the Cook County Hospital, Chicago Hospital, Norwegian Lutheran Deaconess Home and Hospital.

For four years he was secretary of the Physicians Club of Chicago and for three years secretary of the Chicago Neurological Society. He is now vice-president of the Chicago Neurological Society. He is a member of the American Medical Association, the Illinois State Medical Society, the Chicago Medical Society, the American Academy of Medicine, the Physicians' Club of Chicago and the Chicago Neurological Society. He is also a member of the National Geographic Society and of the Kenwood Club of Chicago.

He married Minnie Warner, daughter of Dr. John Warner, of Clinton, Ill., and has one child, Marcella, six years of age.

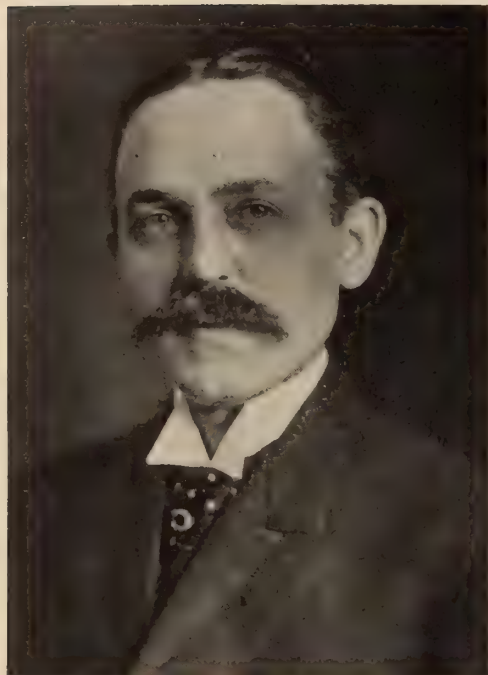

He is the author of a well received treatise upon "Diseases of the Nervous System" published by the Cleveland press.

TWING BROOK WIGGIN, M. D.

Twing Brook Wiggins, M. D., Adjunct professor of medicine in the College of Physicians and Surgeons, University of Illinois, was born in Allegheny City, Pennsylvania.

He received his early education and graduated from the common schools in Janesville, Wisconsin. Following the advice of his preceptor he took a two years' scientific course in the Vanderbilt University of Tennessee. After this preliminary work he entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons and while here he was a special student of Dr. Palmer, of Janesville, Wisconsin, who was at that time one of the faculty of the college. In his Senior year he was first assistant to Dr. Christian Fenger. He received his degree in 1886.

He then took a three months' post-graduate course in the New York Post-Graduate School and after this he spent six months under Dr. King at Oakwood Retreat.

With this preparatory work as a foundation he began the practice of medicine, making internal medicine a specialty. He began his career as a medical teacher by taking charge of the chest department in the Dispensary of his Alma Mater about 1891. He taught physiology for three years and in 1899 went abroad for three months, studying in Vienna and London. The three years following he taught microscopical and chemical diagnosis. In 1901 he took a six months' course at the Johns Hopkins University under Professor Osler.

Since 1902 he has been adjunct professor of medicine of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, which position he now fills. He was a teacher of physiology at the Northwestern Dental College for sixteen years and for the past eight years has occupied the Chair of General Pathology at that institution. He was on the associate staff of the Cook County Hospital for four years, being closely associated with the work of Dr. William E. Quine. He is now a member of the staff of the Lakeside Hospital.

Dr. Wiggins is a member of the American Medical Association, the Illinois State Medical Society, the Chicago Medical Society and of the Physicians' Club of Chicago.

Starting as a poor boy he has with untiring and noble ideals struggled on and upward from humble surroundings, surmounting all difficulties to gain recognition and has made of himself one of the prominent physicians of the northwest. His close application as a student and a practitioner of medicine, together with his liberal education here and abroad has fully equipped him to aid in the direction of the studies of the ardent student of medical science.

"Give the patient hot air and a milk diet"—THE JUNIORS

SENIOR CLASS HISTORY

IN the latter part of September and in early October, 1903, there came to "fair" Chicago a motley crowd of young men and a few of the "wrong" sex, (that expression is borrowed from Dean Quine) who made a dash for the college of Physicians and Surgeons. All nice, bright chaps of varying size, shape, color and mental capacity. And these "D J's," after going through the terrors of registration, formed the nucleus of the "Class of 1907" and they for some inexplicable reason at their first class meeting took it upon themselves to elect Frank Wochos their class president and in that capacity he served them during the term of 1903-4.

A great term it was. How they flocked for a few days to hear the desertations of the "Amoeba" and "Zona Pellucida," both of the great order of Wynekoop, and how soon they flocked the other way. There was also Wood, the class pet, Eckley, fat, jolly and slightly baldheaded. It is said that a certain Corrine B. Eckley is manager of the Eckley ranch. Perhaps that may account for "Pa's" bald spot. We also ran up against the Kuznik, a long haired, long coated, long tied and long framed genius. Do you recognize the little fellow who shrugs his shoulders, takes a deep breath and with a sigh launches forth enough words per cubic inch to fill a twelve by twelve foot room in two and two-thirds seconds? No? Why that's little George Peter Dreyer, B.A., Ph.D., etc. A most popular professor in a most unpopular subject. My, how we did hate to see the end of the term come. Flunk slips? Yes. But it came after Tyler had been president for Sophomore year.

Most of the fellows came back in our second year, and quite a number of new ones. Our professors were all great this year and we just doted on them all, except Evans, Santee, Abbott, Dreyer, Gehrmann, Fantus and a few others. We cannot remember ever doing anything mean to them, but they certainly handed it to us. Santee, headsman of the chamber of horrors (this refers to the twelve cranial nerves) where each unlucky cuss was quartered and drawn and considered himself fortunate if he didn't get zeroed. Eckley—A course in air ship construction with a few points in anatomy thrown in now and then to give us the impression we were studying medicine. Evans showed us where to get off at—and we got off. He also showed his teeth. Abbot: This one left real early and seemed quite peevish and irritable when we suggested he talk to us and not to the blackboard. Gehrmann—Oof, every time he smiled on a person he meant they flunked. Dreyer—Same as before only a little faster, and so it went—and we were blooming glad of it.

During the early part of the year Tyler left us and Vice President Port succeeded him as president. We also lost Dinien this year. Said he could not sleep in the seats as they were not upholstered to suit. After a closely fought election in the spring of '05 we elected Wagner president for our Junior year and most of us went home, to await our credits and extra assessment for laboratory supplies.

At the beginning of our Junior year things looked new to us. New subjects and new Profs. There was dear Doctor "Give-a-look" Yarros, and Sherwood a fine teacher, but whether he was suffering from Facies Hippocraticus or Risus Sardonicus, the class was never able to make out. There was Earle, Wiggin, Eisendrath, full Davison and Dr. Jean Cooke, a mighty fine lady with a winning smile and a head of Clinical Microscopy. Dr. King made it interesting for us in more ways than one. We were most always there on time if he was, for his stories told to classes for ages back were excellent somnifacients. And we tried to oust him—that was a good joke on us, for “fools rush in where angels fear to tread.” And last, but not least, was Professor McDermid, a man whom every member in the class liked and respected, and the best teacher we had in our Junior year, and when he left our college it occasioned genuine regret among us all.

"He speaks an infinite deal of nothing."—SPENCER

Oh, but we had a glorious time at our final class election. We made Robert's rules of order look like a seven dollar bill with the corners torn off. Bundy ran against Davenport for president and although Bundy is a husky man he did not run hard enough for when he met Davvy he stopped—and that nice, new, long gray suit was consigned to the mourners chamber for many a moon. Then came our finals for '06 and once more we scattered but a great number just scattered into the summer term to hear the eminent Professor Bruce King discuss the pros and cons (mostly cons) of Psychiatry and other subjects less interesting, that is, from a passing stand point.

Late in September we were again in school, this time for the last lap, we hope, and I guess they haven't had us going some. The class is larger than it was in our Junior year, yet much smaller than our “predecessors.” Among our members we now have Ameen who was with us in our Freshman year. That diminutive subject of the Persiac Shah, who ably illustrates the saying: “Nothing so pleases a small man as does his ability to make a big showing” and if you notice his neckties you'll see he is capable of doing that all right. S-s-s-h—soft music. Bundy is again wearing that long gray suit.

Williamson took up the first part of our course in Senior Medicine and got through without being asked to quit and that is going some!—for him. Later we got Quine, our venerable and honored dean and he has surely given us all we could well handle and then some. Yarros gets another chance to make life miserable for us again this year. Luckily for us though, it is only for two weeks. Dr. Bacon, our professor of Senior Obstetrics and an excellent man he is. He left for Europe about two weeks ago expecting to be gone about seven weeks. We hope (for his sake of course) that he is elected to the chair of Obstetrics in the University of Vienna.

Medicine exams keep us busy part of the time, then too we have gynology, chest, pediatrics, psychiatry etc. and when not busy with these we try to keep out of the way of John Aimone or dodge Tomlinson.

This could go on for pages but “Aw H—ll! ! what's the use” This is given to the best of the writers knowledge and imagination so if you don't see what you want ask the floor walker—G. Frank Lydston. You all know his reputation in literature.

CLASS HISTORY

A stranger visiting the College of Physicians and Surgeons in the last days of September can easily differentiate the members of the different classes.

Here he will see a few gathered together as if for mutual protection, following each other about in bunches, "rubbering" at the pictures of graduated classes in the hall, and at those very superior beings who seem to regard them with great disdain. The "rubbernecks" are the unsophisticated "DJs" soon to be introduced more or less strenuously to their position in the college society. The "superior beings" are the Sophomores.

In another group he will be able to distinguish the junior from the senior. Both will be found busily scanning their schedules and arranging their semester's programs. The junior will be somewhat excited due to his recent graduation into the medicine and surgery rank, while the senior will be more composed as one who has been there before and will assume a very dignified and patronizing smile.

Those stamped sophomore, junior and senior will be seen on all sides, shaking hands and exchanging greetings with old acquaintances. Everybody is filled with happiness and enthusiasm for all have enjoyed their vacation and are eager to continue their work.

This picture we have seen three times, taking the first three parts one after another and have had the honor of posing in each of the first three characters, from the humble DJ to the eager junior. Yes we did more than pose the parts. We acted them as a perusal of our history from the first will show.

In September, 1904, we entered the "DJ" class about one hundred strong and immediately proceeded to manufacture history. On the evening of September 27, we attended the reception and dance given by the faculty in the college gym and received our first impression of our new surroundings. The next morning found us all together for the first lecture.

Our career in medicine was now begun and we proceeded to fit ourselves to our new environment. Realizing that in union there is strength we got together "as it were" formed friendships and exchanged confidences. In a short time we had formed our permanent class organization and elected Fred Berry, Pittsfield, Ill., president for the Freshman year.

We had just settled down to the new order of things when the class rush was upon us and we found ourselves called upon to establish our position in the school. With characteristic determination and decision we "started after" the Soph's flag which we "had" in an hour of hard fighting. The upper classes now took up the argument and soon the whole school was into it. Who will ever forget the big doings that followed? Who of us will ever forget the scenes around the college building? How well we recall the dramatic "gentlemen, remember the dignity of the institution" as Mr. Browne appealed to us from the steps of the college. And we did remember, after darkness fell and tired nature had asserted herself. That was only two years ago but we already recall it with a feeling akin to emotion. Then we were careless, happy Freshmen, and now, though only a few years older, we feel a realization of our position in life and have learned to check our impulses, and though we often indulge in minor roughhouses, the reckless abandon of the happy "DJ" is gone from us forever.

But let us return to our history. The rush was over and we had demonstrated to the school that we were worthy companions physically. We now set about to place even higher our standard of intellectual ability and accordingly we rushed our books with right good will, alternating the monotony of the hard studious grind with an occasional indulgence in wholesome fun such as erasing the embryonic mustaches (?) and sideburns (?) of those too ambitious of our number.

"A most excellent man hath his tailor made him."—KELLY.

One evening early in February Dr. Price gave the class an informal reception at his home and we were there with our hair braided. We will always remember the good time we had that night and the genial doctor who entertained us. We will always recall with pleasure Wallace's cornet solo and Skwor's valiant rendition of Cavalleria Rusticana on the violin. Lederer first demonstrated his ability as a pianist to us this evening and his services were in such demand that he was compelled to take "time out" several times to recuperate. During these short recesses Skwor would entertain us at the piano and his willingness was greatly appreciated.

Here we met "Pa" and "Ma" Eckley of whom we had heard so much and for whom we have since come to hold the greatest admiration and esteem. Under their able instruction we learned a great deal about the cost of babies' clothes and finished our freshman dissection.

The spring had come and gone. June was at hand and our freshman year was over. We had outgrown the odious "D J" and after electing John Schroeder, Libertyville, Ill., for our next year's president, we left to enjoy our well earned vacation and incidentally to develop the necessary amount of hauteur so necessary to a truly classical sophomore.

One year rolled around and we were back at the old stand in a new role. A few of the old faces were missing but with our new friends who joined us at this time our class roll was appreciably augmented. Our first duty as sophomores was to rush the D Js., which we did in proper fashion. After four hours' battle the freshmen acknowledged their defeat and withdrew. In this struggle we had every chance to test our new classmates and found that they were not wanting. We had now won both our rushes which is quite an enviable record held by very few preceding classes.

Our physical prowess was unquestioned from now on so we started after our studies with the same strength of purpose. Assisted by our true friends and advisors, Dr. Evans and Dr. O'Byrne, pathology became an interesting and instructive study. Dr. Dreyer taught us the mysteries of physiology in his painstaking and interesting way. Dad Eckley and Dr. Santee explained visceral and nervous anatomy to us in clear and concise manner and Dr. Gehrman and Dr. Fischer led us in the chase for the bugs while Dr. Fautus' lecture and laboratory course in therapeutics was keenly appreciated by all.

During our sophomore year all was hard work and we feel the time was well spent as the studies which seemed so hard to us then are now a pleasant and profitable memory. This year marked our first real sorrow when we lost through death our friend and classmate George W. Ascot, who died March 4, 1906.

Late in the spring we elected Bernard McCabe, Helena, Mont., junior class president and left for home.

At last we were juniors. No class rushes for us now. We were above such things. The lower classes could annihilate themselves to their hearts' content while we could look on, or not, just as we chose. We were about to begin the active work in medicine and surgery! And all our dreams of hospitals, bedsides and clinics were about to be realized! Yet somehow we did not feel quite satisfied. We did not know as much as we thought juniors should know. The freshman's ideal of the junior was not materialized. Was it possible that after all we might be an inferior class? No. We had come to realize that juniors know very little, that was all. And knowing that we knew very little we were in a splendid position to learn a great deal and we are making the most of our opportunity.

So now we plunged into the mysteries of medicine and surgery studying harder and with a keener appreciation every day.

On the evening of December 20 we gave the junior prom, the social event of the junior year, given by the juniors to the seniors. The prom was voted by all present a complete and absolute success.

"Dear Papa:—"Broke, remit quickly."—ESSIG.

Shortly afterwards the class sustained a severe shock in losing through death its second member, Lenny C. Gilbert, Oakland, Ill., one of the brightest students and best fellows in our class. Mr. Gilbert died January 31, 1907.

With such an able corps of instructors as Drs. Earle, Wiggin, Phifer, Gardner, Eisenstedt in medicine and Dr. Eisendrath, Daveson Sherwood and Humiston in surgery we look hopefully into the future. Our instructors in gynecology, obstetrics, G. U. and all the other junior studies, are fully capable and are giving us the best they have.

In neurology that very difficult and fascinating study we are especially fortunate in having so capable a lecturer as Dr. Mettler, whose enthusiastic work is appreciated by the class.

In a few short months our Junior year will be over and we shall be ready to start our last season in college life so let us enjoy ourselves now as much as possible. For the Junior class must always be the happiest in college life.

The Junior has passed the first two years, which being fundamental, are of necessity always dry and less interesting and has completely adjusted himself to college life. He has in mind the vision of a coming vacation spent in keen enjoyment and then his last year at school.

The Senior has passed this crisis at the beginning of his senior year and sees before him the abrupt ending of his college days and ways. He sees himself launched on the open sea of life to sink or swim by his own effort. He feels the pang of parting from the fellows who have become such dear friends probably forever.

Therefore let us make the best of our harvest weather and enjoy ourselves heartily, for we feel quite sure that the class of 1908 will not number a single failure.

F. S. CONROY.

JUNIOR PROMENADE

The annual reception in honor of the faculty and seniors, known as the Junior promenade was held at Illinois Hall on December twentieth, nineteen hundred and six.

Thanks to the diligent efforts of the junior president, the various committees and the cooperation of the class, the affair was a great success. So well was the event managed in every detail that the guests of honor openly admitted that it surpassed the reception given a year ago.

The faculty, alumni, seniors and juniors were well represented, about four hundred guests being present. Our honored and jovial dean, Dr. Quine led the grand march, following which was a program of twenty two waltzes and two steps which served to drive away dull care until the early hours of the morning.

Refreshments consisting of sandwiches, coffee, ice cream and cake was served in the dining room at eleven o'clock. The dining room was beautifully decorated with ferns and Xmas greens and a beautiful centerpiece of American Beauties had a station of honor in the center of the room.

The decorations of the dancing hall are worthy of comment, the hall being decorated with Xmas bells, holly and smilax, while the electric lights were decorated with shades of red, blue and orange, the school colors and the platform for the orchestra was banked with stately palms.

ATHLETICS

A review of the football season of 1906 at the College of Physicians and Surgeons from the view of games won was a most unsatisfactory year. It does not require extensive discussion to adequately explain why. In the beginning the team was recruited from a sufficiently large number of men any of whom would develop into players valuable to any team if they were allotted time to practice under proper coaching. These features i. e. the lack of time for practice and the absence of proper coaching have always militated against athletics in every form at this college.

Three games were played, the fourth with Monmouth being called off by wire on account of wet grounds. P. & S. vs. Notre Dame, P. & S. vs. Chicago College of Dental Surgery. P. & S. vs. Chicago Veterinary College. In the first game our team was pitted against seasoned players who had all the advantages of practice and thorough coaching and were familiar with all the signals from the kickoff. We cannot go into details; suffice it to say while the Notre Dame men did not hold us, it was apparent they considered us far their inferiors. The old veteran, R. C. McCormick, who had won his spurs two successive years at Illinois, and Beacom, the giant right tackle of Notre Dame were pitted against each other. The first play was called "left half" through right tackle (P. & S. having the ball) McCormick hit Beacom, made a hole for our left half to go through and the ball was carried to Notre Dame's five yard line before being downed. This so surprised our opponents that various shakeups and consultations were held before the game continued. P. & S. had no difficulty in holding them until the game had progressed to that stage where "wind" is a factor and their better physical condition manifested itself and we were beaten 28 to 0. In the game with the Chicago Dental College team the score was 0 to 0. We had the ball on their goal line once but the referee decided it lacked three inches of being over. The ball was put in play and fumbled, the "Dents" got it and kicked far down the field and time was called.

In the third game we were pitted against men each one of which would weigh thirty pounds more than the corresponding P. & S. player. The game was played in eight inches of mud. The score was 0-0. An unfortunate circumstance happened in this game, one of the opposing players having his leg broken at the ankle.

The spirit displayed by the team under adverse circumstances is certainly worthy of comment and with a little more time to practice, Coach McCormick will do wonders towards developing a team next year.

The baseball season of 1906 was also an unsatisfactory one from the standpoint of games won. Seven games were played and all but two were lost to our opponents. The scores show, however, that same indomitable spirit which will not down until the last man has been put out.

The following games were played with scores:

P. AND S.	12	ST. IGNATIUS	7
P. AND S.	8	CRANE HIGH SCHOOL	5
P. AND S.	7	VALPARAISO	10
P. AND S.	6	UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO	11
P. AND S.	4	ST. VINCENT	5
P. AND S.	3	ARMOUR INSTITUTE	5
P. AND S.	7	LAKE FOREST	8

The splendid fighting spirit of the individual players demonstrates the fact that we have the proper material and a little more team work interspersed will certainly make a winning team. Arrangements are now in process of maturity under the conditions of which the athletic teams representing the P. and S. College will be allowed certain time for practice, coaching, etc., so that in the future more can be expected of our teams than has been shown in the past.

The indoor baseball team has met with better success from the standpoint of games won than either the football or baseball squads. Seven games were played during the past season and five out of the seven were P. and S. victories.

Crane High School, Lewis Institute, Wendell Phillips High School, John Marshall High School, and Polytechnic Institute were the victims, while our boys were defeated by the West Side Y. M. C. A., and South Division Teams. The same enthusiasm shown by the players of the other teams, i. e., football and baseball, manifested itself in the indoor baseball teams.

The basketball team started the season last fall by winning four consecutive games; since then however three games have been won and three lost. The members of this team came largely from the lower classes, i. e., Freshman and Sophomores, and as each member of these classes is required to carry sixteen hundred hours of school work per year, very little time is left to practice, and Mr. Ballard who is captain of the team is not too highly commended for the good showing he has made with the team in the face of such adverse circumstances.

The College of Physicians and Surgeons' department of the Young Men's Christian Association takes the initiative in being a source of strength to the spiritual needs of the medical students. It is intended and indeed it has proven to be very helpful to the student who, after having undergone the strenuous routine of college life would perhaps heed no further the call to eternal things, which surmount all, were it not for the ever present advantages of the department. But again this organization serves for the symmetrical development of soul, mind and body.

The regular weekly meetings are held not merely with the view of being evangelical in their nature but of educational and moral import with spiritual application which seems to better meet the demand of the student who may thus deduce many helpful things from his professional work in which he, of necessity, is delving from day to day. To this end we have been successful in securing the services of prominent men, such as medical missionaries, chautauqua lectures and faculty members.

Aside from the weekly meetings, we have also kept up a monthly lecture series for which we have secured as speakers men from the various medical colleges of the city who have dealt with purely scientific subjects presenting such problems as are being developed at the present day. Special musical features have been added for many of these meetings which have undoubtedly enlivened the mind for the reception of the sturdy problems to follow.

A reading room is kept up, being well supplied with valuable reading material. This room also serves as a retreat for the weary student who could not otherwise find a quiet resting place.

An employment bureau and rooming list are valuable features especially at the opening of the school year when many appear who are in need of such assistance as these branches offer.

The department keeps in close relation with the pastors of the various churches so that men who newly arrive may be welcomed by these churches according to their preference as determined from the compiling of the religious census.

Through the agency of the central Y. M. C. A. we are enabled to give the sick the necessary attentions and make their lonely hours as cheerful as possible. The central association co-operates energetically and untiringly in every effort toward the improvement of the college department.

EDWIN R. TIFFIN,
Department Secretary.

"Tie his hands and he is speechless."—OSTROWSKI.

YOUNG WOMEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

The Y. W. C. A. work has been maintained along three different lines the past year.

(1). Religious meetings have been held weekly, led by a Y. W. C. A. Training Institute student. The lives of Christ and St. Paul have been studied especially.

(2). A medical tea and vesper service for all medical women of the city has been held the last Sunday of each month at 297 Ashland Boulevard, the new home of the Secretary's Training Institute of the Y. W. C. A. These meetings have been addressed by prominent physicians and laymen.

(3) Noon luncheons for the women of the college have been given. They have aided in solving the social problem and are very popular.

GLEE CLUB

Our Glee club of 18 members was organized early in the fall and did some very promising work on several pieces. The work of our senior boys has kept us from regular practice but we hope to have the club in good practice for some of the closing functions of the school.

Medical work has a tendency to cover up anything artistic in the men but nevertheless when you hunt for it you find some exceedingly good musical talent in the school.

SENIOR PROPHECY

ALL this, that I am going to write about, kind reader, occurred in the year of our Lord 1927, and I, the undersigned, do hereby solemnly swear that every word herein contained is true, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

Guarantee No. 80,132 Pure Food and Drugs Act, June, 1906.

As you have noted, it was just twenty years since our illustrious class, (the class of '07) had graduated.

And it was just such a day that would make one's thoughts ramble back to the early scenes of childhood up to youth, then manhood, and especially to that day when you could proudly say you were a voter, then on to that eventful day in April, when we got our little sheepskin, and had heard the president of the university and our dear old dean bidding us God-speed upon our journey through life, which, as they said, was to be far from an easy one.

Thus I sat musing in the mysterious "back room" of my little prescription pharmacy, in a little hamlet in the middle west, when suddenly I was stricken with the thought that I had not seen any of my dear classmates since that eventful day that was brought to my mind by some unknown force of electrical or chemical phenomena.

I immediately took what cash I had (which wasn't much) and closing the shop, went to my lonesome bachelor quarters to pack my grip to go, whither I knew not.

Glancing about, I spied the class picture; gazing at it I beheld a sight most wonderfully magnificent.

We were all young then and so completely filled with knowledge of our chosen profession that we could hardly bide our time to be able to demonstrate to the world that a high-class college education, such as ours had been, was well worth recognition.

Picking up some necessary articles for a long journey, I proceeded to the village depot. Here I hesitated. Which train should I take? The one to the east or the one to the west. Finally, after a few moments of mental debate, I bought one for the land of the setting sun.

It was a lonesome journey, but within a few hours I landed in San Francisco. While strolling along looking for a hotel or inn, I felt as Benjamin Franklin must have felt when he landed in Philadelphia.

Turning the corner at Golden Gate avenue and Larkin street, I beheld an immense electrical sign which was spelling and flashing out the names, letter by letter, of two of my former classmates, Kingery & May, Pharmacists. There they were, Kingery with his bushy locks, and May with his broad, familiar smile.

Having visited with them a few minutes, and getting the addresses of some of the noted pharmacists and chemists of San Francisco, I rambled along until I came upon a sign that attracted my attention and which read "W. J. Beyerman, Ph.G., R.P., 123 Market St., Cigars, Cigarettes, Soda Water, Stamps at Cost, Drugs."

1907 EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

Hunting my way to Market St., I soon found Mr. W. J., commonly known as "Shorty," and he hadn't grown an inch either. He was doing an excellent business in the general drug line and sold P. D. Q. money orders.

Leaving "Shorty" I went down town to a large office building. I saw on the directory, Hugh McNair A.C., B.L., R.P., Ph.G., take pneumatic tube with green light to 23rd floor. I was amazed to think that modest Hugh, the idol of all the ladies, even his wife, should have collected such a name for himself.

Not allowing my astonishment to get the better of me, I got into the pneumatic tube with green light and before I could say X I was in a brilliantly lighted office.

There were rubber pads all over the floor and a colored boy informed me that absolute quiet reigned here.

I was surprised, not to find Hugh with his black sweater on, making an emulsion in a wedge-wood mortar, but on the contrary he was sitting at a massive mahogany desk with a score of stenographers around him, and all of them beautiful in the extreme.

He seemed glad to see me but excused himself saying, that his secretary would attend to anything I might have to say.

Thus saying he pressed a button and there stood our old friend "Scoot" the class secretary in front of me.

"Scoot" informed me that he was known in San Francisco only as George Thompson, which afterward I learned was his full Christian title.

Mr. Thompson told me that McNair was making money so fast that he didn't know what to do with it and that he had recently purchased the 62 story building they now only occupied one floor of.

He also took me to the Ry. Dept., there I noticed a board reading C. C. P. Section Private.

We however were admitted and there stood the three inseparables, Vern A. Plumber, "Bashful" George Laughlin and our celebrated class orator and salutarian Lotis H. Huston.

These three and "Scoot" had an interest in the business and were doing the heavy and light analytical stunts for the concern, which was mostly McNair.

Leaving my dear fellow classmates, I cast one glance around, and there to my surprise I beheld in great letters, over the door, the class motto: "Pharmacie Vera Prevalibit." It did me good to see those words, so full of meaning, so conspicuously displayed in such a building as this.

Making my way to one of the wharves, I took the electric boat Chicago for the Phillipines.

Just as I was hustled off the gang plank a stalwart, man with a dark complexion in uniform, brushed by me. I immediately inquired as to who this distinguished gentleman might be, and one of the sailors informed me that that he was the naval Pharmacist Admiral Robt F. Haines.

The name sounded familiar and I at once set about to find him, running all over the six story vessel which was over two city blocks long. I at last found this same brown eyed genius shrewder than ever, commanding a crew of 12 or more Pharmacists, among whom I recognized E. L. Miles and could see by his stripes that he was above the ordinary seaman.

When Bob saw me, the same old smile came over his countenance, that had made him so popular in chemical lab. and at the Noon-tide Lunch Club, where all the girls fairly idolized him.

He took me to his private apartments where we spent most of the three days trip and there he would always tell me what a great benefit he had not derived from that blamed Materia Medica book he had to write, but he would always wind up by saying, that the Dear Old Dean's intentions were good.

Landing in Manila I came across A. J. Nelson. He immediately took me to his place of business, which was in the largest building in Manila and upon the door I saw painted in very artistic oriental style, A. J. Nelson, Ph.G., Chemist and Manufacturer of the Famous Manila Rope.

I afterwards learned that this meant stogies, for all Nelson never did smoke.

Nelson was very busy so I left and not seeing anything in Manilla that suited my fancy I started for the boat and embarked for China, arriving in Hong Kong in two hours. Please note that the mode of travel had been greatly improved.

While there I met Howell (Red) Johnston '07 who was managing C. D. Johnston & Co., Chinese agency. Altho Howell always was red-headed he made a pretty good excuse for a chink. He also showed me some of his latest compositions of classical music and one of them was a parody on "So Long Mary" in which the name Puckner was very conspicuous. Red and Professor Puckner always were good old pals.

While in Pekin I heard of a man by the name of Earl Ellsworth, who was creating a lot of excitement among the natives, by a new invention of his, whereby he would get them all together in a large hall, and then pass compressed air on to the assemblage and out to the receiving room where the air was condensed and the morphine then extracted from it.

He was making money out of this little stunt which he called, "Professor Hallberg's Modified Extract de Morphine Process." I don't know how Ellsworth ever found out what the process was for I feel certain he was asleep when our learned Professor lectured on Methods of Extraction.

After leaving Pekin it was not long before I was rambling idly about in Calcutta, India.

While there I came upon a street barker, who had a very large crowd assembled, as usual. As he spoke I could just catch a few glimpses of him. It was Andy, our old class President. Karl was selling what he called, "Professor F. M. Goodman's Improved Package Wrapping Block," and was making millions out of this little labor-saving device.

Not finding anything else in India that interested me, I pushed forward to St. Petersburg, Russia. While there I heard a great many anarchistic speeches and also came across John J. Kizemieniewski, who was doing much for the cause of freedomski and was pharmacist and bacteriology expertski to his highness, the Czar.

While in Berlin I read of two former classmates, Jacob Goodman and Henry Pfaff, Jr., who had become very popular in the scientific realms of Germany and were manufacturing an improved beer-ferment, one of their own discoveries, and labeled, "‘Made in Germany’ by Bacteriologie Farbenfabriken von Pfaff und Goodman."

During my sojourn in London, I met Mr. and Mrs. Burkett. Burkett was running a fashionable pharmacy on Piccadilly, a good place for a gentleman like Burkett.

I also met J. E. Miles, Dean Bickford and Frank Blake, the class treasurer, three very prominent American pharmacists, who were trying to get the recognition of the Royal Academy of Science in behalf of the American Pharmacists who were doing so much to eliminate the patent medicine evil. They made very good promoters, excepting Blake, who always was a little slow to speak, but they got nothing for their efforts except the best wishes of the Prince of Wales.

While crossing the Atlantic, we received a wireless on board the ship which read something like this: "Washington, D. C., 1927, Department of Agriculture, Bureau of Chemistry. John P. Lee, M.D., Ph.C., Ph.G., LL.D., Chief of Department, has just finished his investigations on beverage adulterants and has found that nine-tenths of the beverages consumed by the American people are shamefully adulterated. When the passengers found out that this same aforesaid J. P. Lee was commonly known as "Honest Abe," and that I had been a classmate of his, they treated me with courtesy and respect enough to make the Kaiser take a back seat.

Arriving in Boston, we were quarantined by orders of Dr. H. A. Hollnagel, but when he heard that I was on board he immediately released me and after some persuasion he finally agreed to let the rest of the passengers off. But let it be remembered that Hollnagel never was and never will be a man to be easily bribed.

Making my way along the historic highways of dear old Boston (beans), I saw the Christian Era building and decided to go in. When I reached the office I saw sitting at the editor's desk our dear little class editor. P. O. Martin had transformed the paper into quite a pharmaceutical one and had all of the American pharmacists on the subscription list, which showed very markedly the uplifting of American pharmacy, all of which was due to Martin's pen and mind.

While in New York I visited the dean of the New York College of Pharmacy, Dr. Karel B. Blahnik. I was not at all surprised to find Blahnik there, for Kingery always said that if he could draw like Blahnik he'd go to New York.

Karel was teaching Pharmaceutical Engineering, a comparatively new stunt for a College of Pharmacy.

He also told me about the C. C. P. boys that were in New York, for I had not time enough to go to see each one of them. First of all he told me that W. A. Ferguson was also one of the faculty of the college and was teaching the advanced methods of the detection of adulterants in powdered drugs.

T. E. P. Furman was commissioner of customs, a position then paying more than the President of the U. S. used to get.

C. R. Yundt had given up the drug business and was now filling Teddy Roosevelt's old job, that of Police Commissioner and was making good in much the same manner our illustrious president had done. He also told me that Yundt was in great demand as an after dinner speaker, on account of the funny, new stories he could tell.

Blahnik told me that Joseph H. Christmann had been in to see him and that he (Christmann) now controlled the entire Kodak industry in the world, with headquarters in the Kodak City, (Rochester, N. Y.)

He also informed me that Floyd F. Bunch now controlled the well known firm of E. R. Squibb & Sons, N. Y. He said Bunch had a bunch of gray hair now, but I was not surprised at this for Bunch always did have a bunch of them even while at school, but I don't believe these were caused by worrying about anything.

Coming to Chicago I found civic and pharmaceutical conditions very materially bettered.

Frank J. McCabe was Mayor and had put a stop to the cut rate evil that had been so prevalent on State street once upon a time.

E. C. Wach had been appointed city sealer and that had put an absolute stop to all forms of graft in that office for every one except Wach.

G. L. Secord was city and county oil inspector and had created a life time job for himself by not allowing any boats to carry oils or gasoline etc., up the Chicago river without his permission, and of course when he gave this it meant a big fat commission for George.

Homer L. Griest, another ex-pill roller, was Chief of Police and was doing much good work by enforcing the anti-expectorating and anti-cocaine laws.

Edwin T. Schumm was president of the state board and had just issued a book and an article for the Plexus on the "Petrolatenn's propriety of absorbing water."

Max Mendelsohn and Walter D. Haynes were running two of the largest and most attractive drug shops on State street. These two always did have a great liking for the great and near great and beautiful, especially women.

Strolling along Jackson Bouvelard I noticed a drug store sign reading, The Schintz & Schintz Drug Co.

Looking in I saw our pretty little Bertha and busy Fred, they were partners in the true sense of the word and their lives had been running in the same channel and very smoothly at that ever since June 13, '07.

Mrs. Bertha Reisman Schintz was also President of the Amalgamated Sisterhood of Female Pharmacists of America.

From there I went to the dear old college, which by the way now occupied a handsome six story building on the lake front, beside the art institute; they evidently had received that long hoped and long looked for appropriation.

The building was equipped with elevator service, ample locker room, a very large smoking room for those students who must smoke and incidentally was equipped with the best scientific apparatus obtainable. I mention this only incidentally for it always did have that.

There was Prof W. B. Day as cordial as ever and always full of information on any subject.

He was now teaching Materia Medica and the students were taking more interest in that than in any other branch, except of course Pharmacy and Chemistry, Botany, Physiology and a few of the others.

Prof. Hallberg was now Dean of the Faculty, and rightly deserved that position, and the boys all observed the "usual quiet" when Carl S. N. approached, for he was now the Nester of American Pharmacy.

The dear old Dean of our time was giving all of his time and attention to his "back yard" and making drawings of "roots and yarbs."

Prof. Puckner had given up the chair of chemistry and was now President of the A. Ph. A. and Prof. Clark, his former assistant, was now lecturing upon the mysteries of chemistry.

Prof. Snow was still Hallberg's assistant, for who else could they get to fill that position better.

Dr. Rogers was still lecturing on Bones, Digestion, etc.

Prof. E. N. Gathercoal was now kept busy with the class in Bacteriology, and who else could teach that mysterious subject as well.

From Prof. Day I learned that Elmer E. Cassin had eloped with the pretty, little stenographer who used to be so kind to the boys when we needed note paper, type-written lists, etc.

They had gone out to Ogden, Utah, in 1909, the place that Cassin hailed from, and were doing well.

Andrew Bakker, our live wire vice-president had married that pretty West Pullman girl that had induced him to join the M. E. church of that city. Andrew was running a country store somewhere and was happy, as always.

F. W. Carlyle was doing an immense business in Bellflower, Ill., and E. H. Behrensmeyer had just recently bought out the wellknown firm, H. German & Co. of Quincy, Ill., and was making a specialty of "Milk Sweet."

I. W. Lindley, who was also one of the illustrious eight that formed the first bacteriology class, had gone back to Kansas to raise corn and had started a big distillery, as Kansas was no longer a Prohibition state.

T. H. Ruicker and C. G. Carlson were operating a big drug syndicate in Milwaukee, and W. H. Renter was also on the faculty as assistant to Prof. Day, a good place for such a studious lad as Renter had always been.

After seeing most of them and hearing all about the rest of my classmates, I felt very proud of the fact that it had been my lot to graduate with such men as they had all turned out to be.

All that remained for me to do was to go back to my little shop and this I did after deciding that I was in every sense of the word the Rip Van Winkle of Pharmacy and that I had been asleep for twenty years. GEORGE EISELE, Class Prophet.

THE FOOTBALL SEASON OF 1906

CAPT. CARRITHERS

Since the close of the football season of 1906, much talk has been going the rounds of the campus in regard to its being the most disastrous season in the history of the University.

This may be true in view of the number of games won, yet when we stop to consider the obstacles which had to be faced, first by the coaches and then by the team, I do not think that the outcome was altogether bad.

The one great obstacle, which in itself was unsurmountable, was the lack of material. At no time during the season were there enough men upon the squad to constitute two teams with the necessary amount of substitutes. The one year rule which went into effect in 1905 left but the few men who were successful in making the first year team of 1905, to add to the squad and accordingly barred what promising material there might have been in the 1906 Freshman class.

As a consequence the material for the 'varsity was scarce and also of very mediocre ability. Especially was this found to be so in choosing men for the end positions. "Reformed" football had so changed the tactics that our weakness was probably more felt in this position than any other.

The loss of Young, Wham and Bateman, detracted materially from our prospects.

Never was the physical condition of the men at so low an ebb as it was last season. The loss of the training table was ever apparent, as was also the lack of sufficient training which could only be gained through experience in preliminary contests.

The season opened upon Oct. 13, with Wabash College and we were barely able to escape with a 0-0 score. True it is, that this added to the gloom, but Wabash, composed as it was of veterans who were suited to the new style of play, was a formidable foe for any team.

Upon Oct. 27 we played our first game away from home, making a trip to Ann Arbor for the first time in years. The first half of this game was indeed a hard fought battle with the possibility of victory going to either team. The men fought hard and every inch of ground was fiercely contested. A fumbled punt and several costly fumbles tells the story of the second half.

An account of the Michigan game would not be complete without a description of the weather in which it was played. The elements seemed to have combined to oppose anything of the sort, the wind was blowing a gale carrying the drizzling rain in drifts, as it were, down the length of the field between the rows of high bleachers. Worse conditions for handling a ball could not be imagined.

The one game of the season that we hoped to win was that with Wisconsin upon Nov. 10. Every indication pointed to a close contest, which in truth it was although the score 16-6 may lead any who did not see the game to believe differently.

The boys fought with a determination to win that seemed for a time as if it would conquer, but as in a previous game, a fumbled punt and inability to handle the ball securely tells the story.

The most disastrous game of the season was that with Chicago upon Nov. 17. The overwhelming defeat was due principally to the poor playing of our ends and the marvelous playing and general ship of Eckersall.

"The originality is wrung out of them; they are warped into the beaten path where splendid rhetoric traverses." —ILLINI EDITORIALS.

Notwithstanding the previous defeats, the season closed with a victory over our old time enemy, Purdue. The Boilermakers were defeated upon their own field by a 5-0 score.

While much of Illinois' material was of mediocre quality it was not entirely so. We were awarded one place upon the All Western eleven. This place was given to Van Hook at guard, and justly may it be said that he earned it. "Van" played with the same telling determination through defeat and victory and his speed and strength was always felt in the line.

The prospects for next year seem brighter than those of the past year when we consider the material available from the 1906 Freshman team. Because of the retroactive clause in the "reform" movement, Captain-elect Burroughs will not be permitted to play in 1907. It is probable that spring practice will be adopted for the first time, a fact which bids fair to add much to the efficiency of the candidates next fall.

I do not feel that a review of the past season would be complete without saying something in defence of the present coaching system. The statement was made last fall in regard to the lack of success that the men were plenty, but the coaching system weak. Such was not the case. Never was the lack of men more apparent when eleven men had been chosen for the game, there were no substitutes of any ability to fall back upon. The men who made the varsity were of mediocre ability and the substitutes were below these. And is it just that you should expect a champion team from such material?

Of course Yost and Stagg made a success, but Yost had Joe Curtis and Johnny Garrels around whom to build his team, while Stagg had an Eckersall. With individual stars such as these it might be possible to build up a team from mediocre material, but when there are none such, the coach is at a loss.

The best professional coach obtainable would be termed a failure by some over critical enthusiasts, if he failed to turn out a good team, even if he had no material to begin with.

It has been shown that the graduate coaches can make a success when they have good material. It cannot be denied that the team of 1904 was a success, or as near a success as any the institution ever turned out. True it is that it contrasted greatly with the team of the year previous which turned out practically a failure, under a professional coach.

It is a fact that cannot be disputed, that the graduate coach has a deeper interest in his team and that he will put more spirit into the men, who are fighting for the same Alma Mater for whom he fought, than a professional coach whose commercial interest depends solely upon whether he turns out a good team or not.

I think it is no more than just that a fair trial be given the graduate coaching system, under favorable conditions, before turning it down as a failure.

BASEBALL TEAM

1906 BASEBALL SEASON

CAPT. VANDEGRIFT

When Coach Huff called the candidates together for the first time in January, 1906, he missed the faces of Slocum, Rothgeb, Taylor, Opfergelt, Pitts and Whitmore.

The absence of these men meant hard work in schooling the candidates who would be fortunate enough to fill the vacant positions, so that when an important game was played, its importance would have little effect on the playing of the men. It is true in base-ball just as it is in war that one has to "smell the powder" and take a hand, before he becomes the seasoned veteran. He never gets it by reading or coaching alone, although the latter helps him to decide quicker and learn more readily than otherwise.

In order to carry out his view of giving the players experience, Huff had the Chicago Nationals on Illinois Field for two weeks; during which time they gained considerable knowledge.

The first important game of the Varsity schedule took place on Illinois Field, April 21, when the Maroons were taken into camp by a score of 3 to 0. Ovitz here gave the promise of making the record that he afterward made by getting a two-base hit and striking out 15 men.

On April 24, at South Bend, Notre Dame gave us one of the closest and most exciting contests of the year. By a hair raising batting rally they were trimmed 12 to 9.

What promised to be the vital series of the year, and which actually proved so, began at Ann Arbor April 28. They beat us in the closest of close games by a score of 8 to 7.

May 2, Indiana was defeated by a score of 22 to 3.

May 5, at Chicago, with Bushnell in the box, we easily disposed of the Maroons by a score of 8 to 2.

Our second game with the Maize and the Blue lads took place on home grounds May 12. It was a pitchers' battle between Sanger, the Michigan star and Bushnell, the Illinois star, which finally ended in a score of 3 to 2 in favor of Illinois. In the 12th inning, with the bases filled, Capt. Vandagrif singled, scoring the winning run.

May 19, Chicago played us her best game. Up to the sixth inning it seemed to be Chicago's day, but a batting rally in the sixth and seventh inning defeated them by a score of 8 to 7.

Our only game with an Eastern College was with Amhurst, May 29 on Illinois field. Despite the masterful pitching of McRea, the Illini boys won 3 to 0.

On May 26, with the series between Michigan and Illinois a tie, each having won and lost a game, the third was played on Illinois Field in which the Michiganders defeated us by a score of 8 to 4.

"No more mechanics."—JUNIOR ENGINEERS.

On May 30 at Ann Arbor the Wolverines defeated us by a score of 7 to 0, giving them the series, 3 games won and one lost.

May 31, Chicago was defeated at Chicago by a score of 2 to 0, making it four straight victories.

The season closed June 9 at Bloomington, Ind., Illinois winning by score 2 to 0. Juul held the Hoosiers down to two safeties.

The team played championship ball throughout the season, winning 16 out of 19 games. We did not openly declare ourselves champions, but figuring by the percentage method, the way all pennants are decided, we stand far above Michigan.

The present season should be a successful one. All but two men, Demmitt and Brooks have returned. They were very valuable men, but the other big nine colleges have also lost good men. Michigan loses Sanger, who proved to be a great pitcher, and also Wendell, an outfielder. Chicago will also suffer the loss of several men. In summing up the "dope" we should carry back to Illinois the questionable title as Champions of the west.

VARSITY TRACK TEAM

THE 1906 TRACK SEASON

CAPT. PEEBLES

The season of 1906 was the most successful in the history of track athletics at Illinois and most of the credit for this success must be given to coach Gill. The team won all of the five dual meets and all but one of these by large scores. At first the loss of several good men caused some doubt about strength of the team but an unusually good bunch of freshmen strengthened the team and made it stronger than ever before.

The first indoor meet against Chicago proved to be an easy victory for Illinois, the Maroons being defeated 61 to 25. In this meet Norris broke the gymnasium record in the pole vault by clearing 11 feet, 4 inches and Kirkpatrick set a new mark of 5 feet, 11 inches in the high jump. Mackay won the quarter mile in :54 2-5 seconds and Van Inwagen went the mile in 4:47.

Two weeks later the team met Chicago in their own gymnasium and this time had a close rub to win. To the surprise of everyone Illinois won the relay and this left the score 38½ with only the pole vault to decide the meet. As in 1905, when the same thing happened, the vault was a long struggle and as before Illinois won.

Not especially good marks were made in this meet.

In the first outdoor meet Chicago was defeated for the first time in the history of the two schools. This meet, which resulted in a score of 75 to 51 was much the fastest meet ever held on Illinois Field. May carried off the honors by winning the 100 in :10 seconds and the 220 in :22 2-5. Kline ran the 120 hurdles in :16 seconds and Mackay went over the 220 yard hurdles in :25 3-5 with Brown a close second. Kirkpatrick won the high jump at 5 feet, 11 7/8 inches and Burroughs threw the discus 124 feet, 10 inches.

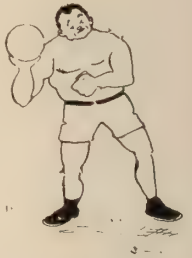

Van Inwagen won the two mile in 10:12 4-5. The Chicago men must also be given credit for their work in this meet. Merriam ran two great races, winning the quarter mile in :50 4-5 and the half mile in 2:01. Capt. Perry threw the hammer 156 feet, 8 inches.

A week later Purdue was defeated 97 to 29 at LaFayette. All the times in this meet were slow on account of the poor condition of the track. Burroughs threw the hammer 149 feet and Dunham won the shot put at 41 feet, 1 inch.

In the Indiana meet on May 18, Illinois placed another victory to her credit by winning, 100 to 26. The mud was a great handicap and considering this some remarkable records were made. May went 220 yards in :22 4-5, Kline ran the high hurdles in :16 1-5.

Richardson won the mile in 4:47 and Froom finished first in the half mile in 2:04.

"Yes my grades are down some, but everything is marked down after the holidays."—R. E. TAYLOR.

Burroughs threw the discus 126 feet, 5 inches, the hammer 148 feet, 10 inches and put the shot 41 ft., 6 inches. Capt. Peebles, Orear and Mackay made a sweep in 440, all finishing close together in :51 3-5.

Illinois did not show up as well as expected in the conference, partly on account of the inexperience of some of the members of the team. Kline carried off three points in the broad jump and Kirkpatrick tied with four others for first in the high jump. Mackey won third in the low hurdles, Burroughs third in the hammer throw and Gear first in the pole vault. Although we did not win that place in the conference, Illinois should be given credit for having the second best team in the west.

The team did not have many stars, as did Michigan and Chicago, but was well balanced and there were no weak spots. The work of this team shows the worth of Harry Gill as a coach. He understands coaching every event and gets the men into condition so they all work together. He cannot be given too much honor by Illinois fans.

BASKETBALL REVIEW

CAPT. JUUL

The game of Basketball, although a new one at the University of Illinois, has come rapidly to the front as a popular sport, in the last two years. Last year was the first time that a "Big Nine" team was put into the field, and taking into consideration this fact, it may be said that the team proved to be a success. It won all but one of the games played on its own floor. While on its trips, it did not fare so well, nevertheless, it may be said that the team profited much by the able coaching Mr. Brown, and that the team was a good foundation for the others which were to follow. The season opened this year with five men of last year's squad in school, and an unlimited amount of material in the freshman class. Mr. Pinkney was secured as coach, and the freshmen immediately showed their class spirit by claiming three of the five places on the "Varsity" team and the Intercollegiate Championship was in sight. But as luck, or rather the Conference Committee interfered, the freshmen were declared ineligible, thus breaking up the "Varsity" team, and giving the coach a most severe problem, that of turning out a winning team, with very limited material and in a very short time. The coach did as well as could be done under the circumstances, and while he did not turn out a winning team, I believe it was one of which the University did not have to feel ashamed, and rather could feel proud of, for its gameness while playing against odds. Great spirit was shown by the different classes and class teams were organized, and a series of contests were arranged for the Class Championships.

These were all spirited contests, and were all well played. With the material in the freshman class there is no doubt in my mind but that Illinois will have representing her next year a basketball team which will not have its equal in any college in the west.

Varsity Swimming and Water Polo Team

WATER POLO REVIEW

CAPT. SCHROEDER

Aquatic sports are comparatively young at Illinois and a few facts concerning their history and development might be told in considering their introduction here.

In the fall of 1905 the first water polo and swimming team was organized at Illinois. At that time, the present coach H. W. Hachmeister, then a student in the University, succeeded in arousing interest in the followers of the sport and a team was organized a short time after. The athletic board decided to assume control of the team thus making it a Varsity team. Before this time very little had been heard of aquatic sports at Illinois, although Chicago and Wisconsin had college teams in the West. In the East, Yale, Harvard, Pennsylvania, Cornell and Columbia had been following swimming since as far back as 1883 and at the present time it is considered as among the leading form of athletics in those universities.

The development of swimming in western colleges in the past two years has been nothing short of marvelous. Chicago, Wisconsin, Minnesota and Illinois, have developed teams which compare very favorably with the older eastern teams such as Yale, Pennsylvania, and Columbia. In last year's game with Yale we were defeated but the score was close and as those who saw the game will probably remember, the fight put up by the Illinois backs in the last half was as game and plucky an exhibition as has ever been witnessed in Illinois athletics.

The first season of swimming, 1905-6 was very successful notwithstanding the fact that the men were green and new at the game. On Feb. 17 we had our first meet, which was with Chicago in the Illinois tank. We won the water polo game by a score of 2 to 1 and lost the swimming events by a score of 28 to 13. The polo game was a great surprise to everybody. After the first rush the Illinois team handled themselves like veterans and outplayed Chicago at every stage of the game. How near Chicago came to scoring in the second half, those who saw the game know, and it was then that our backs showed their mettle. On March 16 we had a return meet with Chicago in their tank and won the polo game by the same score.

The season of 1906-7 has been very successful from our point of view thus far. We have arranged meets with only the best teams in the country and are thus working to develop a team which will rank in the championship class. A series of eight meets has been scheduled including Chicago Athletic Ass'n., Missouri Athletic Club, Central Y. M. C. A., Yale, Pennsylvania, Chicago and Wisconsin. We defeated Central Y. M. C. A. in a hard fought game in their own tank by a score of 2-1 and lost to Chicago. In the remaining meets yet to be played, we have an even chance and the men are working hard to swing the balance in our favor. At present, negotiations are under way to arrange a meet with the New York Athletic Club, who are the American champions, and it may be that Illinois will have a chance to see Daniels, the world's champion swimmer, who won the title at Athens last year, and has since defended it against all comers.

"See how sickly looking and deathly pale and thin; Overwork and study are surely killing him."—S. A. E. WERNING.

Water sports have come to Illinois to stay. The student body has taken a decided interest in them and the season last year was a success in every way. The game requires nerve and skill and as we are not altogether lacking in both of these requirements at Illinois, we are confident that swimming is here to stay.

W. F. SCHROEDER.

TENNIS

The year old Tennis Association was already on a firm basis in the Spring of 1906. There were about 150 members who were all enthusiastic followers of the tennis game. A round-robin tournament between the ten best players for the purpose of choosing a team of four, resulted in the picking of James, Friend, Strong and Yott. This was a veteran team as the same players had represented us the previous year.

After unsuccessful negotiations with several of the Western Universities, matches were scheduled with Iowa and Chicago. On May 19 Illinois defeated Iowa in a one-sided match before a large body of Hawkeye supporters. One week later the Strong University of Chicago team secured a tie from our team at Champaign, in a closely contested match.

The Spring of 1906 also marked our entrance into the Western Conference Meet held annually at the U. of C. While our team, composed of Friend and James, did not meet with success it was in a large part due to an injury to James' foot which slowed him up considerably. At the close of the season the team elected Yott as captain for 1907.

There was more tennis played during the Summer session of 1906 than in other previous Summer sessions. The Summer Tournament was won by Kautz from a large field of faculty and student sharks.

The singles of the Fall Tournament were won by Washburn. The doubles were won by Friend and Yott.

The freshman ineligibility rule will bar some good players from competing for the team, but a team will be readily picked from a large number of capable upper classmen. With the assured support of the student body and a similar anticipated support by the university authorities, we will turn out a team in 1907 that will do credit to Illinois.

CLASS ATHLETICS

SELECTING AN ALL-CLASS FOOTBALL TEAM

That the interest in the inter-class foot-ball games at Illinois is growing rapidly has been shown clearly, not only by the greatly increased attendance at these games and the resulting enthusiasm displayed, but also by the keen rivalry between the members of the different teams for positions on the all-class team. Football of a quality well worth while has been played in these contests and the keen eyes of the university coaches have picked from the contestants several men of varsity calibre. About twenty-five men on an average from each class have trained more or less for the honor of representing their respective classes and of these perhaps seventy-five men have gone into the games. The problem, then, is to select from these seventy-five successful candidates an eleven which is well balanced and which may fairly be said to contain the best foot-ball material in the university outside of the Varsity and regular freshman teams. To select this eleven it is necessary for the committee in charge of the task to watch carefully each play; for the halves are usually but from fifteen to twenty-five minutes in length.

Perhaps the eleven representing the freshman class, composed generally of men who have failed to make the regular freshman team, is at the greatest disadvantage in getting representatives on the all-class team; for, as was the case this last fall, a squad of men is delegated shortly before the game to uphold the class foot-ball game laurels of the first year men. As a result there was a lack of team work on the part of the freshmen in their game with the juniors, which probably also kept the individual players from showing their true worth. However, in this game, which was won by the juniors by a score of 7 to 0, the playing of Garrett as tackle was of a quality good enough to win for him a place on the all-class team. That he was later placed at guard was due to the fact that he seemed to possess all the qualities required for that position.

The second game of the series was played the next day between the sophomore and academy teams, and was won by the former by a score of 10 to 5. There was more team work shown in this game than in that on the preceding day; and while the defeated team contained a number of men of more than average ability, only one, Ferguson, was chosen for a place on the all-class team. Ferguson's ability as a punter and his ability to hold the team together won his place for him.

The next game was between the sophomore and junior teams. Class spirit ran high and an interesting game was won by the juniors by a score of 17 to 0. From the defeated team two men were chosen—Lillard and Meeker for tackle and half-back respectively. Both men were aggressive, Lillard in breaking up plays aimed just outside his end of the line and Meeker in stopping plays after they had passed the forwards. Meeker showed also considerable ability in punting.

The deciding game of the series, between the seniors and juniors, was won by the former by a score of 5 to 0. The game was a close one, with excellent team work and considerable brilliant individual playing in evidence. It is to be regretted that a game in which the teams were so evenly matched should have been decided on a technicality after the juniors had tied the score. The defeated team, however, in the work of Miller, half-back, produced the best individual playing of the series. It was he who with terrific rushes carried the ball for the juniors many yards after it seemed that he had been downed, and who secured the touchdown not allowed. The playing of Dadant and Vosburgh, ends for the juniors, also solved the problem of the selection of the ends for the all-class team, a proposition which up to this time had been perplexing the committee.

The remainder of the places were well filled by men from the senior team, most of the members of which had played on the Champion 1907 team of the year before. McKelvey at center was as steady in passing the ball as he had been two years before: when as a member of the '06 team he had landed the center position. He with Trees and W. Hummel, of the seniors, formed an impregnable line of defense and Hummel was a power in breaking up plays from his tackle position.

The quarterback position was won by Bennett, of the seniors, because of his finished work in running the team and his tackling in the open. Owing, however, to the change in the nature of the game, it is doubtful if his generalship last fall was as good as that of the year before when he also won a place on the all-class team. Of the men selected for positions last fall there are a number who should be heard from later as players on the varsity eleven.

ORATORY AND DEBATE

About the first of October, 1902, a mass meeting was called by the President of the Oratorical Association for the purpose of stirring up enthusiasm for the debating interests. Intercollegiate debating was not new at Illinois at that time. In fact, it had been regularly carried on for many years. The object of this meeting, therefore, was not to introduce the students to something new but merely to stir up "rooters," just as the Athletic Associations frequently hold meetings for a similar purpose. The meeting was well advertised and was perhaps the most enthusiastic ever held, up to that time. The number of "rooters" present, however, was not so great but that they were able to seat themselves comfortably about a single table in one of the class rooms in Main Hall.

In the fall of 1906 another similar meeting was called and about the same amount of advertising was employed. This time, the chapel was filled to overflowing and with "Monny" as yell leader, a large amount of genuine enthusiasm characterized the meeting. The writer can think of nothing that would give a better idea of the growth of debating than a comparison of these two meetings—one in 1902 and the other four years later. Four years ago the general student body considered this form of activity as a dry, uninteresting and unexciting form of mental gymnastics that could be appreciated only by a very few. At present it is recognized as a real live form of contest, not only interesting to the hearer, but exciting in the extreme—a contest in which the "rooter" takes fully as active a part as he does in an athletic contest. Not only has the interest grown but the character of work has kept pace. The discussions which now take place are not mere high school orations following each other in haphazard and incoherent order, but are scholarly and to the point, each contestant being so familiar with his subject through careful preparation and good coaching that he is able so to marshal his arguments as to meet the preceding speaker fairly on this issue. A thorough discussion of this subject would not be complete without mentioning the work of J. Q. Adams, who has done more than anyone else to lift this highly important form of college work to its present high standard.

Our record in debating during the three years preceding the present year is an enviable one. Out of a total of seven debates, Illinois won five. "Jake" Cantlin succeeded in carrying off second prize in the Hamilton Oratorical contest at Chicago—a feat of no small importance when it is considered that all of the big colleges in the central west are represented. The present year has been an off year in debating but Tanquary succeeded in landing second prize in the Hamilton contest for the Orange and Blue. Our reverses this year are not accidental nor are they due to any one cause, but, as is generally true in such cases, they are due to a combination of causes. A thorough analysis of the situation shows that these causes are threefold. In the first place, the debating material this year consisted almost exclusively of "green timber." It is generally considered essential to a strong team that it contain at least one old debater. This year, on the contrary, our four teams included only one man who had had previous experience in intercollegiate debating. In the second place, we have had four debates this year, whereas in the past we have been having only two, or at the most, three contests annually. This means that instead of selecting the six best debaters available, we have been compelled to select the twelve best men. Necessarily the average ability of the individual debater is lower under the latter arrangement. The third reason is that owing to our invincible record in the past, the opposing universities have felt that Illinois was their most formidable rival and have concentrated their strongest teams against us. The first mentioned adverse condition and also the last one will be absent next year. Most of our present debaters will be with us again. No doubt, in addition to this, we will have the usual new supply of freshman stars to add to this list, so a lively contest for places on our teams may be expected. Furthermore, the opposing universities are not likely to concentrate their strongest teams against us as they undoubtedly did this year. Taking all of these things into consideration, the outlook is very promising for the coming year. Perhaps a word will not be amiss here concerning our new "coach," Mr. Halliday. Coming at a time when conditions were adverse, his position has been a difficult one. Yet with four green teams to begin with, the debates have been characterized by splendid team work and exceptionally strong rebuttals—traits generally lacking in new men. When Johnson, Miss Butler and Ellison closed their argument in the Indiana debate no one dared venture a prediction as to the decision. Moynihan, Ross and Hutchin did equally well at Columbus. At St. Paul, Brown, Hershey and Griffith made their argument for municipal ownership before a joint assembly of the state legislature, and at the close of the debate were given an ovation by the members of that body, many of whom characterized the debate as the strongest that they had ever heard. The most gratifying results were obtained in the Nebraska debate held at home. Large, Dorman and Marshall, the only winning team of the year, all new men at intercollegiate debating, put up one of the strongest debates ever heard at Illinois. With a man as our coach who is able to accomplish so much under adverse circumstances, a man who has won not only the confidence of the students as a coach, but also their respect as a man who believes in fairness and honesty in every way, we cannot fail to be successful in the future. H. L. MELTON.

"What care I for her, if she undervalue me." —BURR IRWIN.

THE YEAR IN ORATORY AND DEBATE

Intercollegiate debating and oratory occupies a peculiar position in university activities. On the one side it is closely allied to athletics; it has its try-outs, its long and arduous training, its final contests. On the other side it is very nearly related to the regular work of the classroom. For it demands some degree of acquaintance with history, economics, and kindred subjects, a considerable knowledge of the principles of exposition and argumentation and at least moderate facility in public speaking. It ought, therefore to be judged, not on the assumption that it belongs exclusively to either class but instead upon a basis of its own.

The object of intercollegiate debating and oratory is primarily twofold, whether considered from the standpoint of the student or of the University; first, to afford pleasant and helpful drill in the ability to find out facts, to put them together in convincing form, and to present them straightforwardly and honestly; second, to win victories.

The latter is not the more important. It alone would scarcely justify the effort given these contests and the expense incurred because of them. Yet strangely enough the lesser good affords the greater stimulus. It is the hope of winning which starts most men out at the beginning and which keeps them at it till the end. And victory has a legitimate place. Nothing else so satisfies a contestant after his long weeks of preparation; nothing else can so successfully give the stamp of completion to his work; nothing so nerves him for the steady grind of future classroom labors. If it be true that there is no joy so intense as that of conflict, there is none sweeter than that of victory.

Yet it is easy to see that it is not necessary for the Varsity orator or debating team to win, in order to secure the greater advantages which these contests afford. Just as in athletics, there may be all the advantages of training, all the sportsmanship and rivalry of contest, without victory, while the loser, if he lose honorably, must have been as zealous in his study, as careful in the writing and delivering of his speech, as was the winner. And so, though for the moment the notion of victory looms large to him, he finds his chief reward in the sharpened intellect, the readier tongue, and the sturdiness and honesty of purpose which every typical college representative develops, be he winner or loser.

It is gratifying to note that this conception of the real purpose of intercollegiate contests is becoming more clearly recognized and accepted by the participating universities. The question now asked is not, How can we devise a proposition with the balance on our side? or, How can we secure judges who are prejudiced in our favor? but, How can we frame a fair question? Where may we secure impartial judges?

It is upon this ground of earnestness of work, honesty of presentation, and impartiality of decision that Illinois feels confident of securing, in the future, real educational results, and hopes to win her share of victories.

University for the first time.*

- †1. Engineering.
- ‡2. (a) Law.
(b) Science.
- 3. (a) Literature and Arts.
(b) Business.
- *4. Agriculture.

†Since the adoption of the three year rule athletes may advantageously omit this course altogether, starting with either Law or Science.

*Aspirants for social honors are advised to start at once with 4 although one semester's work in 3a will give a large acquaintanceship which may perhaps be found valuable later. Special second semester courses in 4 for athletes are well patronized.

NOTE:—Students finding courses here at the main works too difficult will upon application be given certificates entitling them to attend our branch establishments at Madison, Wis., Ann Arbor, Mich., or Chicago, Ill., and securing for them full privileges without extra charge.

TOLD ON THE CAMPUS—Stories

“To Scotchy”

You had no words to speak your thoughts,
But you were faithful as a friend.
Your little life made brighter days,
In truth we mourn its tragic end.

The Shame of the Seniors

With unfeigned reluctance I begin the task which lies before me. To probe the depths of this fell sore upon the good name of the University which I am bidden to lay bare before the public gaze. It is a duty which would strike terror into the heart of the bravest, and it is solely because I desire to check the crimes of this hideous class of beings that I consent to run the risk here involved. The task is not only dangerous, but very difficult because of the inaccessibility of documents of proof. From earliest times the members of the class of 1907 have allowed a few presumptuous spirits to direct its policy and bear the responsibilities that should be borne by the whole number. The history of the shame of the seniors is largely the biographies of these men.

Before proceeding to the astounding revelations that are to follow, it were well to speak of a few good men of the class who have for some reason or other ceased to become members of it. Moynihan remained with it a long while, but at last even his magnanimous soul could no longer endure the corruption which he saw on every side, so he withdrew and became a member of the class of 1908. Brad Gardner, Jim Cleasy, "Bobe" Mack and John Kirkpatrick were equally disgusted with the society in which they found themselves, but they did not have tolerance enough to stay with it as long as did Moynihan. They left it earlier, graduating in 1906. So far so good—for them. But behold what was left!

To dive directly into the heart of the matter is better at the first. It has been found out that the first of a long train of corruption was in a house on Oregon street in Urbana. Here "Artie" Bennett, Jim Cleasy, Brad Gardner, "Dean" Van Doren, Jim Young and "Casey" Brooks, with the aid of a few others whose names can not now be ascertained, organized that vicious organization known as The Bunch of Keys. They, with several others, among them "Hunk" Austin, Frank Welch, Ray Mullin and Benedict met in the cemetery, and chose a list of officers for the forthcoming election. So crafty was their organization that they succeeded in electing all of their candidates but Benedict, who was defeated by the Anti-Ring forces supporting Prep Kellum. The Bunch of Keys objected to the man who had already been chosen temporary president of the class as color rush captain, and decided to have in his stead the notorious Van Doren. Mark, then, the full enormity of their wiles. It was advertised that Benedict was to lead the color rush, and the sophomores kidnapped him and carried him away to the infinite glee of the first year men whose real captain was thus left to (mis)manage the affair. Such responsibility was beyond the scope of his essentially under handed methods, and the result was that the rush that year was almost a farce. It lasted about two minutes.

As a result of this Van Doren was deposed from his place in the confidence of his classmates, and for a long time was obliged to live in retirement. At last, however, he regained prestige by a piece of knavery connected with the English Club. Having been elected president through some misunderstanding, he became a member of the Executive Committee. He then called a meeting and was elected editor of The Illinois.

It is only lately that it has been discovered that the records of that committee meeting have wholly disappeared, and as far as any of my investigation has been able to go, I have not found any signs that any one but him was at the meeting which elected him to his editorial position. Nor did his trickery end here. Of his own initiative and unchecked by any restraining hand he made Pete Bech business manager of the magazine, thus bringing together in close touch two of the least mitigated scoundrels and politicians in the whole class.

Here it becomes imperative to reveal the deeds of the man whose name has just been introduced. Pete Beck, having come from Pontiac, was favorably received at the University, and it will drop a bomb among doves when it is here certified that he is an escaped inmate of the reformatory of his parent city—that is, he barely escaped being an inmate. He first loomed largely into college prominence by capturing the Illio election at the end of his Sophomore year. Over that episode it were better to draw the veil of charity. How are the mighty fallen! Suffice it to say that during his junior year he gave up the study of law, and has retired from active business. Once more the terrible class is shown in its true colors. For fear of the censorship of common respect for Illinois I refrain from giving a list of the offices Bech has since held. The number is incredible, and I will leave it to the imagination of dreams.

Meanwhile, in another part of the University another center of the plague is located. Around the Illini office is hung a cloud of privacy, and if you ever saw a sanctum you have seen men there who got there no one knows how. Helm and Gill, as greedy for public profit as men even become, stole upon the first prize of the Illinois and made it their own. The result has been terrible to contemplate. The paper has been enlarged—to make room for more advertisements. Not even the front page is sacred from the invasion of the mercenary. Often two blocks of advertisement occupy most of it. On the fourth page a small thin stream of locals—interspersed with ads—wanders through broad meadows of information as to where you can most cheaply buy flatirons and overalls. On the third page is a column reserved exclusively for notices from the President's office. (The President has a great many store-rooms to let, and positions to offer the right applicants.) The crowning glory of the whole sheet is the second page. Here the staff is given in full, even to the Chief

Cartoonist and Staff Chief Cartoonist. The rest is advertisement except for an inch or so occasionally devoted to an editorial. The editorials by the policy of the paper can not be very original or critical. Such freedom might lose a subscriber. There is only room for an encouragement to go to the game or the debate or the play tomorrow, whatever it is, and commendation for those who went to the game or the debate or the play yesterday. "One thing is sure," they all end, "Illinois is a game loser."

Both Helm and Gill have dabbled largely in politics. In the first semester of the Senior year Gill, by dint of calling on the Irish vote succeeded in winning the place formerly held by the efficient Scholler under whose administration that wonderful Junior Smoker was held. The fact that Thomas E. Gill was chosen to an office so important shows well to what depths his classmates had fallen. However Mr. Gill served honestly and well—for him—and made a very effective prelude for the great contest which was to follow.

During the spring of his sophomore year Charles S. Pillsbury quietly announced his candidacy for the President of the Senior class in the second semester. His method was exceeding sly. He went to everyone of any influence, and got them to promise to help him if possible, but to keep quiet for the time being. Later when any one would slyly let out what he knew of the subject, he would find that all else were also informed. As a result when the year 1907 finally came and any other candidates might have expected to begin their canvasses, they found that all the votes were pledged. Mr. Pillsbury was elected at a close meeting unparalleled for political juggling in the annals of the Senior Class. It has been somewhat difficult to obtain accurate reports as to this meeting, but no hint as to the kind of work done is needed besides the names of the men elected to different offices. It is eternally to the credit of those who there twisted their wires, however, that several young ladies were elected. Thus is shown that the class is not wholly lost. It is only fitting to say here, that the corruption from which this class has suffered has never concerned the girls in it.

I have tried to avoid comment as much as possible in this brief sketch, for I have felt that a bare presentation of the facts to be revealed was sufficient for even the most hardened gloater over the tender morsels of revelation literature. There is no effort whatever made to point the moral or adorn the tale, but to give forth to the candid and unprejudiced eyes of men and woman of the University Community an idea of the vice that is flourishing in their very midst, that they may rise in their might and see that before another Independence Day the whole class shall have been banished forever from the campus.

A Lament for Fancy

PRIZE POEM

"But now can no man see none elves mo."

—CHAUCER

*Witching fancy is as mute
As the burrow-digging brute
Or she mumbles by the fire
Inarticulate desire
For a tropic realm where she Might live forever lazily.*

Cloe and Corwin are not seen
Any longer on the green,
Simple man and simple maid
Dancing in the summer shade
Under sympathetic trees
Where drowsy humming of bees
Gather through the summer hours
Amber honey from white flowers.
Merry rover through the night,
Not of malice, folly or spite
But of mischief. Puck has hid
In the pine tree's pyramid.
Pricks no more the gossip's tongue.
Critic age blaming the young,
Will not kink the pony's mane.
Drying linen will not stain,
Nor initiate the scoffer
To the order of the laughter;
For our manners are so tight
That the elfin monarch's wight
Sure that he would find no hearts
To enjoy his jocund arts,
Plays no further prank upon
The gay command of Oberon.

Now the city of the fairies
All its merry-making buries
In the grave-yard of the past
(Ah, was it too rare to last?)
Titania the fair
Has cut off her yellow hair.

Holds no more her stainless revels
On moonlighted woodland levels,
And has given up her court
To the foxes' midnight sport.
Oberon no longer tells
How the magic of his spells
Won the stubborn maiden over
To the kisses of her lover,
For he is so dreary hearted
That his wisdom has departed
Leaving him alone to ponder
On some half-forgotten wonder.

Her magnificence gone by,
And his might a memory,
Titania and Oberon
To a shy retreat have gone
Where they never see sunlight,
But beneath a weeping willow
With thistle-down for pillow
Wear away a life that seems
But a sleep with troubled dreams.

Little dancers on the moonbeams
All, all gone and never one beams
Out upon us as we pass
By their ballrooms in the grass!
For in these days do our fancies
Make no music for their dances!

*Witching fancy is as mute
As the burrow-digging brute,
Or she murmurs by the fire
Inarticulate desire
For a tropic realm where she Might live ever lazily.*

Vaun's Lady of the Mist

PRIZE STORY

The timbers of the roof began to creak strangely, and a little later I could hear the sound as of some enormous weight rocking back and forth above us. At first I did not understand and looked at Vaun for explanation. Just as he parted his lips to speak, he was anticipated by a deep metallic cry from above, and a little later when the sound was repeated with a slight variation in tone, recognized it. The sexton was beginning to ring the bell. Directly it was in full swing, and the measured creaking of the timbers with the howling of the iron throat made conversation impossible, until with a final roar the clang ended, and the groaning of the beams gradually died away.

"Do you not find it great nuisance?" I asked him, my voice sounding strange and weak in the new silence.

"I did, but do no longer. I have come to feel about as kindly toward it as poor Quasimodo toward his big Mary. It seldom breaks silence except on Sundays and Wednesdays, and I should miss it if anything interrupted its periods. Even if it were not wholly pleasing to me, the view from my south window would make large reparation."

He walked to the window and swung the heavy sash inward. I looked out upon the town below us. The calm that American Sunday mornings have was unbroken save by the scolding of several sparrows aroused by the bell ringing and the clatter of a butcher's cart on the pavement that seemed so far away. It had rained the night before, and though the dew had gone from the leaves, they were still bright, and the housetops across the street from us were clean. All over the city we could see thin gray smokes from breakfast fires, smoke that rose with a leisurely calm very different from the business like hurry of that from week day cooking, smoke that rose in slender pillars here and there and then slowly spread out to disappear in the full sunlight. They seemed the fairy supports of some invisible roof. The whole sky was clear, and the sunlight that came into the open window was warm with the smiling warmth of May.

"It is very beautiful," I said tamely.

"And reverent. Here I make my morning devotion and feel no need of the preacher below. Down there it is very calm and peaceful. The organ will play solemnly, and the stained light will fall upon many elegant gowns, and a feeling of common sanctity will fill the room. But I like it better here. The subdued noises of the town are very musical at this distance, and I am fond of the clear sunshine. A sermon would sound small from my window."

"I wonder what the good people below would think if they heard you. Would you be left undisturbed in your studies?"

He smiled a little "I am never disturbed. The rent I pay makes my living here seem regular, and I never discuss religious matters with any of the congregation. I am very busy with my books."

I turned and looked again at the loaded shelves whose contents I had admired so much in the glamor of the night before. A little of the romance had gone when daylight came, and the worn, discolored leather of his much prized folios seemed poorer than it then had. Even the treasure of his collection, Lambs' Burton, which all book lovers know was so long lost in America, and which Vaun kept chained to his table, looked almost forlorn in the splendor of the morning. Dust lay thick everywhere, and I could not but feel a dim sense of the untidiness of the place. My scholar-host seemed to guess I was not as well pleased as I might have been.

"It seems different in the day time, doesn't it? Some day, when I have time, I must clean it all up thoroughly?,"

"You need a woman's hand here now and then" I remarked.

"Not one has ever been in the steeple study. I am afraid they would hardly know what to make of it."

"You ought to give a party here, and invite some of the ladies of the town to see your den which they hear so much of. I know several who would be wonderfully glad to come."

"Do you think so? It would seem good to have a girl in this sombre old room—but I know very few girls. I am afraid I have forgotten them."

He was looking out over the roofs of the town. I could not see his face.

"I know a great many. Let me take you to call on some of them, and then you can ask the ones you like best to visit your treasures in the steeple."

He kept his back to me, but he had shifted his position so I could now see his features reflected in the window pane. A strange look was there, a gloom I had never seen in him before. When he finally spoke he was evasive.

"Some day, perhaps. We can see later. There is plenty of time."

I felt much sympathy for his sadness, but I thought I was doing the wisest thing when I shortly took my leave. He did not ask me to remain, yet his farewell hand-clasp was warm though nervous, and he invited me to come again as he stood by the door watching me start down the long stairway.

On the following Friday evening I went again through the spring rain to the study of my new friend. He was not at home, but I waited as I knew he would want me to do, and cast about for a book to entertain me. On the table lay Le Morte D'Arthur (Wynken de Worde, 1523) open at the close of the eighteenth book where it tells "How true love is likened to summer." I read the chapter again, I knew it well, and spoke aloud the words of the last sentence, struck by their peculiar fitness for this half-medieval study, "Wherefore I liken love nowadays unto summer and winter; for like as the one is hot and the other cold, so fareth love nowadays; therefore all ye that be lovers call unto your remembrance the month of May, like as did Queen Guenevere, for whom I make a little mention, that while she lived she was a true lover, and therefore she had a good end."

On the margin Vaun had written: "But truly I know not why any should liken love to May or to summer or winter, for love endureth and doth not change and the heart that changeth hath never known love; wherefore I liken love to none of these, but rather to the heart of the Father, whence all love cometh."

As I finished I heard quick feet hurrying up the stairs, and the next moment Vaun rushed into the room. I hardly knew him. His long coat was soaked and the broad brim of his soft hat hung soddently down upon his neck behind. He had pushed it up in front, perhaps to keep it from hindering his sight, and the light from the hanging lamp fell full upon his wet face. His eyes were glittering excitedly beneath his brows. His lips were dry, for he breathed through his mouth as if he had been running far.

I did not know what to say. I was not even sure he recognized me, for he stared wildly in my direction for a moment, then went to the window and threw it open with a crash. I saw him drawing in great draughts of the heavy night air, and when a veering gust of wind dashed a shower of rain into the room he did not seem to feel it. Suddenly he began to mutter to himself but aloud enough for me to understand:

"I will call her the 'Lady of the Mist.'" I have seen the Lady my eyes have sought so long. My eyes will never seek another—I will never see another—I have seen the 'Helen' of my days,—and she is gone, gone, and I can not find her again—I will call her the 'Lady of the Mist.'"

Afterwards his words became indistinct, died away, and then he stood staring into the night.

Suddenly he turned and for the first time seemed to recognize me.

"You! You! I did not see you! Come! Quick! you are a friend of ladies, and you must help me find my Lady of the Mist."

"But, Vaun, but—."

"Come. None but you can help me. Let us go out to find her in the night."

His voice was so imperative that I drew on my coat and followed silently. It was not blowing much outside, but the warm rain seemed to fill the air. The nearest arc-light was but a few yards away, yet it only made a bright cloud in the midst of the darkness. The smell of spring showers was upon us, and I began to feel the exultation of the season as I hurried after Vaun, who splashed straight through the puddles of the sidewalk without seeming to take any notice of the weather. Not without a little inward complaint at the vagary of my companion I went after him at his own gait.

We were soon out of the quiet avenue where the church stood and upon a street that would have been alive with people but for the damp of the evening. As it was there were only enough passersby to keep away the sense of desertion that comes later in the night when good people have all gone to bed. The lights that danced like Will-o'-the-Wisps in least at every crossing winked and sputtered. A closed carriage rumbled down the street, the shoes of the horses pounding dully on the drenched pavement.

At length Vaun came abruptly to the hall and stepped into a doorway. "Wait here," he said, and stood looking across the street as if he would pierce the fog with eyes eager to see something beyond which he was afraid to seek in person. I waited without a question. I had no clear idea what the outcome was to be, but I was willing to let things take their own course.

We stood there in the door a long time. I counted the carriages that passed—there were seven, and the pedestrians—there were thirty-two. I speculated idly on the amount of time that would elapse before the coming of each electric car, and watched the yellow gleam of their lights struggle with the fogs.

The street grew gradually quieter, and a nameless atmosphere of loneliness that empty streets always have for me drew about us. I looked cautiously at the man beside me. I need not have used any care against disturbing him by my scrutiny for he seemed not at all conscious of my presence. No motion was visible in his body save his quick breathing. He stood with one hand against the wall leaning outward in a position that must have tired his muscles sorely. His eyes were still strained toward the other side of the street, though I was sure nothing could be seen in that direction. The intentness of his gaze, however, made me begin to stare in the direction toward which his face was turned. We were looking diagonally over a crossing through the luminous nebula under a light toward a gleam which I knew came from the large display window of a store on the other side. I saw that it was this my friend would not take his eyes from.

I looked at him again. I was thinking of some way to coax him home, when suddenly he started with a sharp intake of his breath. Immediately he began to shudder as though he had become aware of the chill of his dripping clothes. I followed his gaze again. The figure of a woman had entered the pathway between the lighted window and our position, and was walking toward us. As she neared the middle of the street, by some illusion of the mist and the brightness she seemed to assume heroic proportions, and as the light fell for a moment on her slightly upturned face, I saw a countenance that seemed wonderfully beautiful. When she reached the sidewalk she disappeared down the avenue. Vaun's face was pale. For a second he stood as if dumb, then with the eager words, "My Lady of the Mist," started to hurry after her. I caught him by the arm.

"For Heaven's sake, Vaun, remember what you are doing. You do not even know her!"

"Do not know her! She is my 'Lady of the Mist,' I have seen her a hundred times, I tell you, but she was always far away. Now I must see her again. I must know whether she is real or a dream. She is my 'Lady of the Mist,'"

"Wait. If she is real your hurrying after her will insult her—"

"Insult her! I insult her? I would worship her!"

"But she would not understand. You must stay here without moving. I will go by the alley and meet her to see if I know her. Then I can tell you, and all will come out well."

He hesitated for a moment, but finally a feeling of weariness seemed to come over him, the reaction from his long effort. He sat down on the lower step of the stairway behind us and dropped his chin in his hands.

Off I set at top speed, and with rare good fortune after a long detour I met the wonderful creature of the bogs full in the glare of the electric headlight of a passing car.

I knew her well. I knew the coldness of her heart and the baseness of her ideals. I had seen her kneel a rigid worshiper at the altar of Mammon, and I had heard her sneer at the unwisdom of him who does not love best the courts of her lord. I knew her, for I had loved her, and heard her scoffing at me, a scholar.

So I went back to my friend, and when I met his eager questionings with a lie I felt no pang.

"She must have been a dream," I said. "I could not find the beautiful 'Lady of the Mist' you seemed to see."

For a moment I pitied his disappointment, but my heart approved as I led him back to the study in the steeple. "No dream's worth waking."

“Before and After Taking”

With deep sympathy for the unfortunate author of “The Night Before Christmas.”

Before

It's the week before ex'es, and all through the house
Every guy is a-boning; it's still as a mouse.
There are wrinkles of worry in each Freshman's brow,
And even the Seniors are serious now.

We are thinking of times that we went to a show,
When we should have been getting a lesson or so;
When we wasted an evening at cards or at chess,
With mandolin tinkle or singing. Yes! Yes!

Now the mandolin's silent; guitars give no sound;
Our spirit's departed deep into the ground.
We flunk every real class and Rhetoric, too;
Just one thought in our minds,—“How can I get through?”

Oh! we'll get what's a-coming and plenty to spare.
That's why we in anguish are tearing our hair.
And when they are over we'll go on a spree,
For there'll be no more cramming till next June. D'you see?

During

That week before ex'es we thought was the worst.
'Twas the week of the year that we thought was accursed.
But this week of the ex'es has that “skinned a mile.”
We are all twice as gloomy. You can't find a smile.

Each night after grub as we file slowly in,
We recount the day's battles. “That ex was a sin.
I know that we never had half of that stuff.
What I wrote on paper was nothing but bluff.

“Why that Professor must be crazy to think we’d know that.
When I looked at the questions I knew I’d fall flat.
Well! I guess it’s all off. That I’ve flunked there’s no doubt;
I might as well pack up my ‘duds’ and get out.

“Why didn’t I study when I had a chance?
Might have known that I’d flunk if I went to that dance.
Still, I might as well wait until “Tommy” sends round
Those little slips saying, ‘You’ve failed’ or ‘You’ve conned.’”

After

’Tis the week after ex’es! This good old “rough-house”
And boisterous music would scare any mouse.
For we’ve found we got through and the second half’s on.
Why! Most of us didn’t get even a “con.”

“Well! We’re going to work this semester; you bet!
Still, there’s no use of starting to work hard just yet.”
‘Oh yes! We will work.’ The same old excuse
That we used last semester. It’s seen lots of use.

All text books are now in the “curio-shop.”
(It used to be called “THE STUDENTS” CO-OP.)
For their day has gone past, and ’twill not come again
Till the middle of May. (We’ll start work about then.)

For study and class-work must not interfere
With the regular work of a college-man’s year.
Away with all books! Let them not come to light
Till the “week before ex’es” again is in sight.

Told on the Campus

How a Life Was Saved

Barney's machine with its usual load of beautiful women was wending its way rather swiftly in and out among the street cars and carriages that crowded Green street. "Funk-funk-funk" went the large, elegant, solid brass horn, which Barney had spent so many hours shining.

The party was gay. But why should they not be so, for were they not being permitted to grace the seats of the best and only auto any frat owned. The moon shone down on the large, long and very expensive auto, (it had been whispered around the campus that Barney had confidentially told a very dear friend of his, who in turn imparted the valuable information to a friend, who had told a number of friends that the machine had really cost twenty-five hundred dollars, but that he didn't care a bit for he was a Phi Psi and was the richest man in the whole school) and made the party even more happy.

Just at this moment a figure dashed out from behind a dark corner and whispered in accents wild: "Beware—lest thou should bring death and disaster this very eve!"

But little did the jolly care-free automobilists care, for with dear old Barney (why of course he was a dear—for didn't he take them on an auto ride) at the wheel little did they fear what disaster might overtake them.

But wait. Of a sudden Barney and the fair one at his left let out a shriek that rent the September air. "My God, he was right" groaned Barney as he fussed with his brakes. The machine came to a sudden stop (as was advertised in the illustrated circular) and Barney with a great leap jumped over the steering gear to the ground.

With fleeing steps he fled the scene of the catastrophe and shortly returned with weeping eyes and head bowed.

"The deed is did!" he cried in accents wild, "we ran over a Kentucky peanut and killed a kernel!"

Then slowly the machine started and the large, elegant, solid brass horn went "Funk-funk-funk."

Inspiration on the Drill Ground

Students are sometimes accused of being ungrateful for the benefits that they receive at the hands of the state. The cheerful alacrity with which they respond to the call for their services on the drill ground should be a lesson to such carping critics. Whoever doubts the value and efficiency of the student as a stalwart defender of the nation should visit the university community on one of those magnificent occasions when the regiment is assembled for such purposes as having the Freshman uniforms inspected or to do honor to a visiting delegation from the Amalgamated Clayworkers' Association.

The most casual observer cannot fail to feel the esprit du corps that pervades the ranks of the whole regiment. Not every man, to be sure, is qualified by nature to hold as exalted a position as that of corporal; but even though the common members of the rank and file can never hope to attain the military carriage and commanding mien produced by a pair of shining chevrons, it is easy to see with what unbounded admiration the humble private looks upon these superior officers. The officers, in turn, are not unaware of the grave responsibilities resting upon their embroidered shoulder straps. They realize fully that upon them depends the safety of the nation's honor and the success or failure of the Military Ball. Although they are fully conscious that the eyes of all the feminine portion of the community are constantly directed towards them, they exercise a modest condescension towards the common soldiers, as who should say, "We, too, were once members of the rank and file, and now look at us!"

It is indeed an inspiring sight to witness an assembly of the whole regiment. At the first note of the bugle, the face of the first sergeant takes on a stern and determined look which shows that matters of grave importance are about to be taken up. The second lieutenant looks carefully to his gleaming sword—the same trusty blade that has led many a thrilling charge upon the dairy barn. Down the ranks runs the sharp order, "Company, Fall in!", and in a twinkling the magnificent assemblage is brought into order, and the innocent bystander looks with a gasp of admiration down long lines of tense, expectant faces, while the officers, with their brilliant uniforms and glistening swords stand out in sharp relief against the dull gray ranks. There is a hush of anticipation on the regiment; all are awaiting the announcement of the great purpose for which they have been assembled. Suddenly a clear, commanding voice breaks the expectant stillness:

"Attention to orders! University of Blankety Blank, Military Department, November Fifteenth, 1906. General Order Number Ten. With the approval of the President and the Council of Administration, Mr. Algernon Jones is hereby appointed member of the Cadet Hop Committee. By order of Lieutenant Colonel Passeel!"

Amid an impressive silence, the adjutant faces sharply about, salutes and retires. The captains are ordered to dismiss their companies, and an inspiring event passes into history.

Our Glee Club

Kirkpatrick has a deep bass voice,
'Twould make a papa frog rejoice,
Shorty's voice is way up high,
Just like a skylark in the sky;
Not like the sky-lark's voice you know,
But way up where the breezes blow.
Lewis is a solo man,
What he can't sing, no one can;
The other voices richly blend,
Perhaps to make a prefect end.
The banjo, flute and mandolin
Produce a rather pleasant din.
Joe Mershan can clog a bit,
At drum and traps he's rather fit.
This time we all will vote, I guess,
The Glee-Club Concert a success.

DID HE COME TO STUDY, OR—?

The University of Illinois

The University of Illinois is the largest, best and greatest AGG College in the United States. The campus comprises 220 AKERS, beautified by three BROOKS, an historic FORD and an artistic LAKE.

In the agricultural college courses are offered in the Arts and Crafts by a BAKER, a CARPENTER and a TAYLOR. An economic FIELD for statistical work with the live stock is enclosed with a three bar fence* with an upright POST from the war department. Here may be seen a native FOX, a HART, a NIGHTINGALE and a CRANE. In the CENTER of the field is the handsome library HALL. Here may be purchased HAY, PILLSBURY'S best and the usual STAPLES. At MORROW Hall STRONG COFFEY is served with lamb chops, while in the new Physics building a KNIPP may be secured. Practice is given in the science of GARNERING.

In the L. & A. College the Art school offers work in the standard colors: BLACK, three kinds of WHITE, BROWN, GRAY and three shades of GREEN.

The College of Science is known from one TOWNSEND to the other.

In the College of Engineering the WILEY engineer is trained. BENCH work is given in the Shops, and field work under an experienced GARDNER.

In the Graduate school DAVID has succeeded JONATHAN, and now there is no change without D. K.

The campus of the University is handsome. WELLS are sunk as a border decoration, MOSS grows upon the sides thereof, irrigation is by means of a German WIEHR, and the SWIFT "Silver Creek" flows through the midst. The forestry may have many varieties of trees, but the faculty boasts of three kinds of WOOD. In addition to the police force of Pete, the great DEHN helps with a SAVAGE bark, far worse than a physical KNIPP.

In fitting out the Agricultural building a leather-covered DAVENPORT was installed and is in active use.

At the Observatory KEAN eyes observe the stars and with the aid of some Spanish they SEYMOUR than others.

Use of the library on the part of every one is encouraged despite a SHARP head librarian. Each of the reading rooms is lighted by a sun: SIMPSON in one and JACKSON in the other. The loan desk is easily found a JUTTON out from the book stack.

The girls are USHERED into Household science, the boys into Military science and at the Woman's building a LINCOLN occurs.

HOWE can one object to Physical culture? And who can get around "G" and go away in a HUFF? Far better to LOVE the sports which aim to develop a TRUMAN and to keep out of a RUTT.

It is the HOPE of the administration that this will inCLINE students to come here from every part of Illinois. Do not D. KLEIN but DEHN to come. It is the MAIN desire of King JAMES I to SEYMOUR students. WATSON of Illinois can resist these attractions? The MOORE the Sophs see, the gladder they be, for they know they can WETMORE in the Boneyard.

Freshmen are especially warned not to wear a DERBY on first arrival, for the Sophs know what to DUFOUR that. But even if the Freshies can avoid the Sophs they cannot DODGE English I.

The PRICE for study here is not high, but a BOND must be deposited at the library loan desk. For further information address any of the five CLARKS. T. A. however is credited with the latest and largest stock of information in regard to students.

ROASTS

THE U OF I. PRIMER

A is for Adams who keeps all our green;
If you do not recall him, 'tis Pete that I mean.
B is for Bates who likes well to hear
Love poems, read softly, quite close to his ear.
C is for Case, a cognomen cute,
She's a case for fair, and a freshman to boot.
D is for Daniels, with a smile on her face
As permanent as is a Puritan's grace.
E is for Ethel, we don't care which one,
They're all of them able to give one a run.
F is for Fitzie, a curious child,
Quite good to look at, but harmless and mild.
G is for Gordley, our Δ K E friend,
Don't ask him for sense, for he has none to lend.
H is for Hawley, of the class of '07,
This only is certain, he'll be smiling in heaven.
I is for McGuire, you may not see why,
But his walk and his manner proclaim him an I.
J is for Herbie, whose last name is Juul,
If he were to leave, 'twould be hard on the school.
K is for the Kappas, they're all of them fine,
For most any old Kappa we'd willingly pine.
L is for Lynch, who except for his name,
Would possess scarce a jot of title to fame.
M is for Meta, an author of fame,
She's the darling of Straight Creek, the place whence she came.
N is for Nebeker, who is caught by a web,
Although she has left him, his love does not ebb.
O is for Otto, who has left us at last,
And his race from the Uni is vanishing fast.
P is for Peggy, a true pepper-box,
Just shake her and notice the forth-coming knocks.
Q is for Quayle, whom we thrust upon you
Because its the only name starting with Q.
R is for Riley; we want to comment
On the fine way in which she is keeping this Lent.
S is for Sparks, who is famous, you know,
Because of himself he only can crow.
T is for T. A., who'll get lots of roasts,
Of all sorts and conditions from "pickles" to "toasts."
U is for Urbana, and C's for Champaign,
They are both towns exceedingly famous for rain.
V 's for Van Doren, a popular student,
He stands well with the profs—that always is prudent.
W is for Wells, a chance for a text.
All right in his way, but show us the next.
X is the hour we all have to leave,
That it is not eleven we often quite grieve.
Y is for Yott, at tennis he's great,
At Barney's he's greater; at class he is late.
Z is for Ziesing, a Delt of renown,
You can't help but know him; just look at his frown.

The subject of all the town talk—

“Now here was I on this street car, skidooing around, when the car would give these large jerks, and all the time trying to talk to this man who would simply scream and utter these wild shrieks every time he would see me so utterly chagrined and unnerved. And Ida—”

(An extract from the Illini most any Sunday during the early spring months.)

Ski Hi held their 23rd annual formal party last night in the dining room of the chapter house. Turner furnished the music and chaperoned. The help assisted, also in the capacity as partners. Three brooms and a mop were requisitioned into service,—if dummy bridge why not two step. Uneedas and Durham were served. Telegrams of condolence were received from sisters and other ex-loves at Smith and Vassar; also a tribute of lemons tastefully trimmed with spinach and immortelles. Bob Swayne was the out of town guest.

Harry Forhundred of Boswell, Indiana, sustained a fractured jaw during a mixup co-incident with a slip of his partner while having difficulty in steering backwards. He will however recover. Regret in general.

The bell tingled like an ulcerated tooth hit by the dentist's drill. The porter, dropping a sleepy cuss-word, hastened to berth eight, where the Senior engineer was boring the button into the side of the car.

"Gee," he explained, shaken into sensibility, "I was dreamin' of draughtin' and was just putting in a thumb tack."

I is for Ingold whose drawings all bore;

L is for Lynch, who ought to be hung;

L is for Lewis, where the Delts got rung;

S is for Swayne, our Bob who has left us;

May she never return anymore to molest us.

THE OLD CLOTHES MAN

The old man planted three swift kicks on the fusser's spinal column-in the sacral lumbar, and the dorsal vertebrae respectfully.

"Gee what a lightning calculator," remarked the young man, alighting. "Did you notice how rapidly he footed up that column?"

SOME PEOPLE DON'T BELIEVE IN SIGNS

Here's to the brilliant Illio roasts;
Some may be jests and some be toasts;
Some will be puns, and many boasts;
But here s to the hosts that are just plain roasts.

SENIORS!

Our 8-Page Illini

Of 1907-08

Should Follow You

Next fall we increase the size from four pages to eight pages—the greatest step the paper has ever taken. A new era in its history will begin—an era of practical journalism—of really live newspaper work—of expansion and aggressiveness

Space for Everything That's News

Able, Experienced Staff Writers

Authentic Reports of All Events

THE ILLINI will be the students' paper in the truest sense, fearlessly voicing student opinion in its editorials and consistently promoting student interests

And ye villein spake unto Sir Kay, saying: "To yon castell there comes eache houre ye nickle plated dude from colleyge to fuss ye fayre daughtere of ye seneschal. Ande every houre comes it forth agayne, with ye swifte kyck stynging ye tayle piece of its jerkin."

And Sir Kay, being mazed in thots of his fair flisse, ye fayre Erica, sayde testily, "What boots it?" and rode on.

"Ye seneschal generally," called ye villein after him.

Vewhych was considered a dern fayre joke in them dayes.

Meditations

To run the Illio or not to run it, that's the question.
Whether it is nobler in the mind to suffer
The slings and arrows of Dean T. A.,
Or to be elected to this position exempt,
And by slaving lose all grades. To work—to worry—
To earn no thanks but hate, aye, there's the rub:
For in running the ILLIO what a graft may come?
The friends we lose, the proud man's contumely,
Of all who hold the pocketbook so close,
The choice of all this with all its glory great
Or peace—puzzles the will,
And makes us rather bear the ills of grinds
Than fly to other Student managers.
Thus wrath of friends makes cowards of us all.

Lieut. governor delivered a very interesting three hour lecture in the chapel.

 And this is the song that she sang

Athletic's Ambition

The elephant is very strong,
As strong as fifty men 'twould seem.
I wish we had an elephant
To play upon our football team.

The kangaroo can jump, 'tis said,
As high as ten, perhaps twelve feet;
If he can throw as well, you know,
In basketball we'd ne'er be beat.

The rabbit is a common fowl,
But then the rabbit runs like sin;
If he could do a half or two
Perhaps he'd help our track team win.

There is no bird nor beast nor fish,
Nor insect that can bat at all;
But then for fish we need not wish,
For we ourselves can play baseball.

Ben Hur was rounding the last turn of the home stretch. The car of Messala thundered at his right wheel. In the gallery the breathless senators clung to the railings, rigid with excitement.

"Talk about your circuses," said the junior member from Illinois, sitting back in disgust, "why it isn't in it with our interscholastic."

Inhuman Provocation

"And he says, says he: 'Try on these spring clothes,' and I says 'Sure, and I'll turn back all but wot hangs best.' And he says grinnin', 'Ah, the survival of the fittest.' That, your honor, was why I killed him."

On the Law School Steps

"I hate a case in equity where the defendant is a Texan. It is worse than any of the whole lot." "I don't see why you should particularly hate them." "Oh you are so apt to get a bum steer."

On Fussing

When you fuss with a girl in automobile
And you aim a fond kiss and she joggles
You connect with her nose—how embarrassed you feel.
And you cannot goo-goo through your goggles.

If you fuss with a girl in a tippy canoe
And you jiggle the slightest shake
The boat will deposit you in the goo
And, reader, 'tis cold in the lake.

Plain every day fussing, conducted on land
Is endorsed by authorities Ma'r'm;
With naught to distract from the business in hand—
Or rather the business in arm.

Regrets

Tell 'em not in mournful numbers
Business lectures are a snap
Wake me from my peaceful slumbers,
Punch me when I take a nap.
Lit is real, Lit is earnest,
And an A should be my goal;
Dry as dust are all the lectures,
I can't work to save my soul.

Lives of Business pros remind us
We can make our lives as dead,
And departing leave behind us
Dollars that we never spread.
Let us then be up and doing;
Take our notes, keep awake;
But to me for stupid lectures
Prof. Fiske's classes take the cake.

"Well—now—really—what—do—you—think."

Precaution vs. Diphtheria

The spread of this malignant disease should be promptly stopped, and this may be done if every member of the community will do his part.

Do not eat with your knife until it has been thoroughly sterilized.

Do not drink at the Uni. fountain until it thaws. Wash all dishes after each meal.

Take no bad money.

Do not swallow pins.

Do not use hair pins picked up in men's gymnasium.

A Young (Clarence) girl sat on the Moss (C. M.) in the Shade (Imogene) of a Grove (S. L.) of Oakes (Anna M.) which stood in a Little (L. L.) Glenn (Eleanor M.) in an Urban (H. B.) Park (J. B.). Through the Trees (M. J.) she could look down to the Beach (B. M.) and see a Fisher (O. S.) going through the Channel (C. W.) in a Little (R. F.) Sale (D. O.) boat. A Child (W. E.) ran past in a Merry (C. E.) Chase (H. H.) after a Mann (Jessie) evidently her father, whom she was Fast (E. E.) overtaking.

Suddenly a Young (Atha) Mann (Mary) tall and Straight (Fleda) came around a Large (J. H.) Berry (Kenneth) Bush (Kathryn) at her Wright (Helen).

"Oh! Howe (Mary) you startled me!" she said, "I've been waiting a Long (E. V.) time."

"It has been a Harder (R. O.) Day (W. W.) than I expected. Did you miss me much, Littell (Huldah) girl?" he asked.

"Quite a good Deal (J. F.);" she admitted.

"Rose" (Elizabeth), he said hurriedly, "you promised me my answer tonight. What is it, Darling? (F. N.) Don't say Noe (P. R.) Orr (R. H.) you will break my Hart" (W. E.)

"Dick" (C. R.) she whispered "You're so blind. I should think you'd know I Love (C. W.) you."

"Mohr (Herman) than anyone else?" he urged.

"Moore (Mabel) than anyone else" she repeated after him.

He looked down into her eyes, deep Welles (Nelle) of Love (R. J.) Their lips met in a Long (G. D.) kiss.

"You're simply Devine" (R. P.) he told her, "you're a Juul (Herbert V.) My Joy (H. P.) is complete".

"Dicke" (O. A.) she said, "you're so foolish, dear."

And they sat there until Long (A. T.) after the sun had sunk out of sight behind the Hill (Carrie) West (P. R.) of them. A Kuhl (W. P.) breeze began to blow in from the Lake (E. S.) at the dying of the Day (H. C.), and the dark Watters (J. M.) slowly changed from Greene (W. B.) to Black (W.)

Our Exchanges

Howard Railsback, one of our home boys, has just recently been elected editor-in-chief of the 1909 Illio, the annual publication of our state university. This is the highest office that his class can give him. Howard has always been popular at home and we have always predicted great success for him at school. Success to you, Howard.

The Charleston daily published the following letter of Beyers to his grandmother:

April 6, 1907.

Dear Grandmother: Last night I went to see Maud; but tomorrow it will be May. I have just come from calling and made a hit at the Alpha Chi house. They made me stay for dinner—caught at the plate as it were. There were lots of singles made there—I mean single maids. Anybody would have been glad to help me make a home run, I reckon. I stopped at the first cushion though.

The house is fuller every time I go; the rush was fierce; I felt like compressed yeast only the yeast could raise the dough, and I couldn't. The man behind me was counting my vertebrae with his nose it was a pug nose; I was glad of that. Some one called us a pack of wild animals, but it reminded me more of a pack of cards, anyway I felt like the deuce. There wasn't enough room to kick.

I stood on one foot a long while; then on the other—don't know whose it was. The upstairs seats haven't cane bottoms—they are all rush seats.

Talking about boards, I am awfully bored by the military drill here. My major is in English, but my captain will be in the boneyard if he don't change. I am in the color squad, with the Filipinos and the green men. We paddled our corporal yesterday, because he said our row was crooked.

It was cold, but now it is

Fair—well—I must close, FREDDY.

LOUIS MOORE HONORED

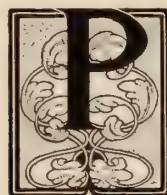

Dean of College Selects Him as One to Make Trip to Chicago to Test Work.

Mr. Louis Moore, son of Mr. Geo. O. Moore of this city, who is attending the U. of I. at Champaign, from which institution he will graduate next June in the Mechanical Engineering Department, completing a four years' course, has been selected by the Dean of the U. of I. to go with nineteen other students to Chicago where they will meet twenty students from the Wisconsin University jointly to make an elaborate test of the Chicago Edison Fisk Street Station. Louis did not seek the honor but it came because of the fact that he is a thorough student and can spare the time of one week from his studies without danger of flunking in his examinations.

The students thus chosen have all their expenses paid and receive a bonus besides. We certainly are well pleased to hear of Newman boys leaning out so well in the different educational institutions and preparing themselves for useful manhood.—Newman Independent, Feb. 8, 1907.

PRINTING, like everything else, is of divers grades; but, unlike most other things, the price of the very best is no higher than you are required to pay for the poorest. This is especially true in the printing of college annuals. We give you the benefit of a wide range of experience in this work, both as printers and as college men, and our aim is always to keep quality up and prices down. Our equipment is of the best—both as to material and labor—and the promptness with which we turn out work has gained for us an enviable reputation among the foremost colleges throughout the United States. We respectfully solicit correspondence concerning any sort of college printing or binding

Safe Rules for Women's League With Adjustable Holes to Get Through

Resolved, That strolling on the South Campus, or in other unfrequented places, after dark, is unwise, (excepting in special cases).

Resolved, That going on the street, alone after dark is to be avoided whenever possible, (or when a man is available).

Resolved, That as a rule, callers should be received only on one night between Sunday and Friday; and that they should not be entertained after ten o'clock at night, (except, of course—).

Resolved, That the practice of patronizing restaurants at night is to be condemned, (when broke or not hungry).

Resolved, That no member of this League shall knowingly attend any social affair where there is no chaperone present, (where ignorance is bliss, etc.).

Resolved, That members of this League shall leave Crystal Lake by ten o'clock at night, except for special affairs, (and when the walking is poor).

Gets on Wrong Train

I. M. Brazier, a student who is learning the proper method of milking cows and weaning calves at the University of Illinois, boarded a southbound train at Champaign on Thursday, when he intended to go to Chicago, and he did not learn of his mistake until he reached Mattoon.

THE PROBLEM OF FARM POWER SOLVED

BY THE

I. H. C. GASOLINE ENGINE

The I. H. C. engine has so fully demonstrated its efficiency as a power producer for farm purposes that it has satisfactorily solved the problem of farm power.

The reason why the I. H. C. engine has solved this problem is due to its efficiency, durability and economy. An I. H. C. engine is efficient because it produces an ample and a steady power sufficient to pull its load at all times; durable because it is strongly made and has few parts to wear out; economical because it consumes little fuel and does not require an engineer.

If you need power for farm or any other purpose, it will pay you well to call on the local agent and see the I. H. C. engine, or write for an illustrated catalog.

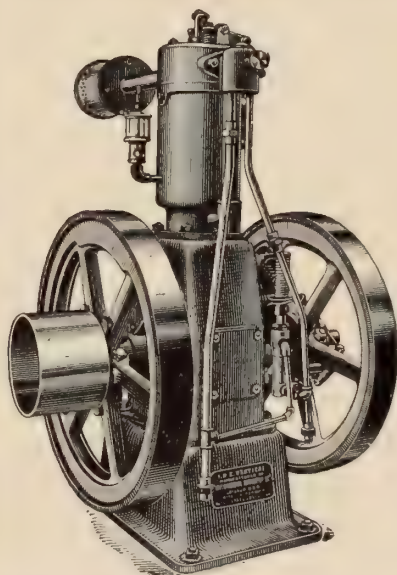

International Harvester Company engines are made in the following styles and sizes: Horizontal (portable and stationary) 4, 6, 8, 10, 12, 15 and 20 H. P. Vertical, 2 and 3 H. P.

Not Like Home

Earl Donoho of Troy, one of the students at the University of Illinois, came down from Champaign Saturday night with the local boys and proceeded over to the jail. His uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Barnsback, had been in charge there for some years, and Donaho had forgotten that there had been a change in the management and that the family had moved out into the west end. He walked in at the front door without knocking, deposited his suit case in the hall and hung up his coat. There was no response when he tapped at the parlor door, so he supposed the ladies were in the sewing room up stairs. He ascended to the second floor and going to what had been the sewing room knocked at the door. There was no response, and he returned to the first floor. Then he woke up and it was a much crestfallen youth that grabbed his coat and case and hurried out. Jailer Hogan happened to be busy in another part of the house at the time Earl was wandering around or that young man might have been taken for a burglar. Donoho's friends when they meet him now begin to murmur: "He walked right in and turned around and walked right out again."—Edwardsville Intelligence, Dec. 24, 1906.

COLLEGE MUSICIANS' TOUR

Clyde S. Mowder and Club to be Entertained
by Governor Deneen

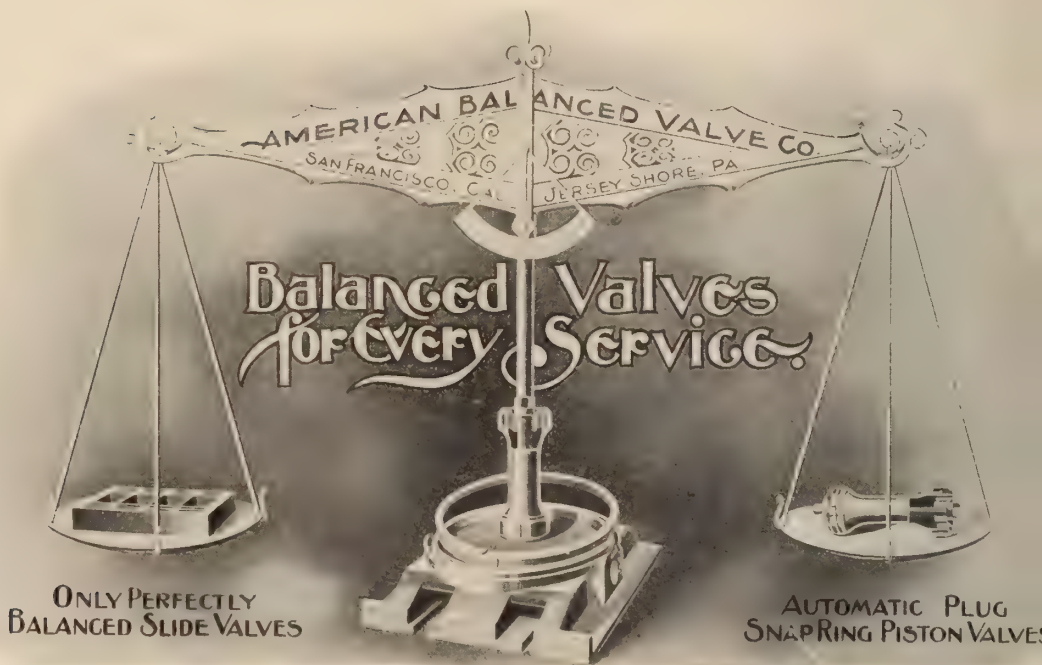

Our old friend Clyde S. Mowder sends a program of concerts that are being rendered by the Glee and Mandolin clubs of the University of Illinois during an extended tour through southern and central Illinois. Clyde calls our attention to the fact that he is leader of the orchestra as well as the Mandolin club. The club numbers thirty-three members and far surpasses any other ever sent out by the university. The program shows them to be handling nothing but music of the highest class. The present tour includes East St. Louis, Alton, Taylorville, Springfield, Lincoln and Champaign. Mr. Mowder informs us that while at Springfield the club was entertained by Governor and Mrs. Deneen.—Mason County Democrat.

PULLED OUT OF THE CHICKEN COOP

A chemist should be a natural born wit
Because you understand
No matter what you say to him
He has a retort at hand.

True?

"I hear that the faculty are going to name the forestry the orchard grove."

"How is that?"

Why when you go out there you find a pair under the trees, peaches all around, once in a while a date and occasionally a lemon is picked.

Heard in the Gym

The university G. B. B. T. (Gym Bacteria Ball Team) came out of its antiseptic dressing room. "Who is that at the plate?" inquired the captain, a three eyed Vibrio from the towel room.

"Oh, Gym Itch is catching and that's Cotton batting"
cried an orange organism.

Don't Cry

Inspired I rose at midnight
Oh balmy was the air
I gathered up the bed clothes
And piled them on a chair,
I hustled off the mattress,
And grabbed my fountain pen,
I pounced upon a writing pad
And went to bed again.
No doubt my friend you wonder
Just why I did the thing.
You see I wished to dictate
A poem on the Spring.

* snorted the bony equine as his tooth alighted on a shoe peg oat,
"That was a hell of a noat," he shouted in an aggrieved tone of voice.

CORN KING AND CLOVERLEAF MANURE SPREADERS

Agricultural science has demonstrated that a light application of manure at short intervals is much better than a heavy one at long intervals. A light application of barnyard manure can only be accomplished by the use of the manure spreader.

A Corn King or Cloverleaf manure spreader will enable one to scatter a light amount of manure in a most satisfactory manner, because, being equipped with feed regulators, the amount of manure to be spread can be controlled by the operator.

The Corn King is a return apron, and the Cloverleaf an endless apron machine. One lever controls the mechanism, and after the load has been scattered the spreader throws itself out of gear.

The Corn King and Cloverleaf spreaders are each made in three sizes.

Our local agents will be pleased to show you the excellent features of these spreaders. Call on them or write for catalogs.

Waterman's Ideal Fountain Pen

The pen with the Clip-Cap

Write Postals
Home

POSTCARD

This pen, which is the Standard of the World, has become so because of the Spoon Feed. The Spoon Feed is flat and broad and has cups cut into the side which take up the overflow, common to all other fountain pens, when the ink is almost all out of the barrel. The Spoon Feed absolutely and positively overcomes this defect that existed even in Waterman's Ideal before its advent. Any of our dealers will explain this further. The Clip-Cap, a comparatively new feature, holds the pen securely in the pocket. These pens may be purchased almost anywhere and are exchangeable until satisfactory.
